WELCOME TO GPS ASTROLOGY

A MESSAGE FROM MARK LERNER

“August, which is ruled by Leo, is the month of the Dog-star, or of Sirius, which thus brings Sirius into close relation to Leo. Leo, in the cosmic sense (and apart from our solar system altogether) is ruled by Sirius...Later, when the new world religion is founded and is working, we shall find that the major monthly festival in August, held at the time of the full moon, will be dedicated to the task of making contact, via the Hierarchy, with Sirian force.”

--Alice A. Bailey (via her teacher the Tibetan Master D.K. in Esoteric Astrology, page 299).

The above quotation is one of hundreds regarding the importance of the supernal triangle of The Great Bear, The Pleiades and Sirius – hence our dramatic cover (designed by our Managing Editor Katya Juliet Lerner) for this inaugural issue of GPS Astrology.

One of the special keynotes regarding GPS Astrology is for the entire evolving field of astrological knowledge and wisdom and this online magazine to be a vehicle for the promotion of Goodwill as Love in Action (as I experienced in my years working at LucisTrust.org in NYC before becoming a member of the Findhorn Foundation in Northern Scotland in the 1970s).

Thank you so much to Katya Juliet Lerner for the extraordinary efforts she has put into making our initial online magazine because without Katya’s expertise and a lifetime of encouragement to me, GPS Astrology would not be emerging now into the world.

A big Thank You goes to all the contributing writers and with more writers to come and additional special features to run in our next issue that will appear at the Libra-Aries Full Moon on October 9.

While we usually have a complimentary Global Hot Spot feature on our Great Bear Enterprises website at www.greatbearenterprises.com at the time of each New Moon, Full Moon, Eclipse, Solstice or Equinox, at this time please see here our full-color chart of this potent Full Moon of Leo-Aquarius as calculated for Washington, D.C. along with a Global Astro-Locality map showing the exact Rising, Setting, Above and Below lines of solar, lunar and planetary vibrations. (For much more on the realm of Astro-Locality, see our special primer on this subject elsewhere in GPS Astrology revealing the chart for the Sun entering Cancer on June 21, 2022 along with its global map as well as the important feature by Wayne Moody in this issue.)

In regard to how the cover design came about and the higher purpose of GPS Astrology, along with how my business Great Bear Enterprises originated, please

with MARK LERNER

Part I

Why this cover story? The June 10, 1991 edition of Time magazine revealed a basically dark cover with the word EVIL in large, black letters across it. Under that huge word was this question: "Does it exist—or do bad things just happen?"

I bought the magazine, read the feature, but was not very much moved by the author. The cover was clearly impressive, but the writer really did not penetrate into metaphysical mysteries or come to any great conclusions. As I was thinking about this month's Leo 1991 cover for Welcome To Planet Earth, I thought about how little people focus on Goodness and the enormous spiritual power in the Good. Hence, the cover of this issue.

The Random House Dictionary of the English Language (College Edition) defines "evil" as "1. morally wrong; immoral; wicked 2. harmful: injurious 3. unfortunate; disastrous" while "good" is described as "1. morally excellent; virtuous; righteous 2. satisfactory in quality, quantity, or degree 3. right; proper; fit 4. well-behaved. Later on this dictionary brings up words like "Good Book" (meaning the Bible), "good egg," "good day," "Good Friday," "Goodman" (as in Benny Goodman) and even the "Good Neighbor Policy."

I mention all this because the word "GOOD" has almost become invisible and forgotten in our fast-paced, materialistic lives. It's there, in all those names, but very few people really wonder about its origins and spiritual source. It is EVIL that receives all the headlines, the glamorous stories, the fanfare and human beings' fears and worries. But what about GOOD?

Does it exist—or do great things just happen accidentally, at random, with no purpose, meaning or direction?

Many years ago I turned on the television and "accidentally" found a program in which an Indian guru was giving a talk to his disciples about the Good and Goodness. The more I listened, the more amazed I became. I realized that I had never in my whole life ever heard anyone talk so long and so beautifully about the power of Goodness and how the Good as a spiritual reality could turn one's life around for the "better." The more this person talked about the Good and evoked its presence, the more this meeting of minds and hearts became other-worldly and uplifting. It became contagious in his audience, a Good virus ready to do its work among a population diseased by Evil, Ignorance and conscious darkness.

In the mid-1970s I worked at the Lucis Trust/Arcane School (the Alice A. Bailey/ Tibetan Master D.K. center) in New York City. I bought and studied their astounding books on metaphysics for many years. There was one quote in the final book of the series—The Rays and The Initiations—that I have always remembered as a powerful statement about the reality of Goodness. Here it is (pages 58-59): "Have I succeeded in giving you a somewhat wider vision of the significance of initiation in these brief expositions? Do you see more clearly the growing beauty of the Whole and the goodness of the Purpose and the wisdom of the Plan? Do you realize more deeply that beauty, goodness and wisdom are not qualities, as their inadequate nomenclature would imply, but are great facts in manifestation? Do you grasp the truth that they are not descriptive of Deity but are the names of Lives of a potency and activity of which men can as yet know nothing?"

Mark Lerner

Re-read that last portion of the final question: "names of Lives of a potency and activity of which men can as yet know nothing." When I read that for the first time some 17 years ago, a chill went up and down my spine. Goodness. Beauty. Wisdom. Not mere qualities. Names of Lives. If it is true that to have "genius" means, literally, "to be inhabited by a genie," could it be that by being "good," radiating goodwill to friends, family members and the world, that one could become an emissary or warrior of the "Good," where Goodness is a real spiritual Presence and Cosmic Life?

Not long after reading The Rays and The Initiations, I came across Maurice Nicoll's phenomenal book on the parables of Christ, called The New Man. If you want to read one book that focuses like a laser beam on the issues of Goodness, Truth and the Spiritual Life, this is it. One of the foundations of Nicoll's work is that The New Testament was basically written for us today, modern humanity of the 20th century, as a kind of psychological handbook, allowing us to become men and women of Goodwill. And the "key" to understanding the parables and the plot was that "Jesus" and "Christ" were, in effect, two different beings or two different energies. As Nicoll states on page 55: "Jesus always represents, in miracles, the power of Good acting on Truth and making it living."

Re-read that sentence before moving on. Everywhere Jesus is mentioned in The New Testament symbolizes the power of Good; everywhere Christ is mentioned represents the power of Truth. The truly advanced human being must fuse personality and soul, the Christ and the Jesus of his or her whole spiritual existence. Nicoll's premise was that the mysterious power that made Jesus such a remarkable figure was his identification with the healing presence of the Good—not necessarily his command of the Truth or his knowledge of religious laws. This short Penguin paperback book is a must if you love the Bible and want to understand The New Testament and the power for Good in the world on a higher level.

Good: Does it exist—or do great things just happen? I believe there is a real spiritual life that we can call Good. When a human being becomes a force for Good in the world, that individual is impregnated by the life quality of that vast entity known as the Good. A beautiful looking person may be an emissary of the spiritual life or presence we can call Divine Beauty. It's a reality—not a fiction, illusion or glamour. So, too, will a wise human being become the literal "personification" of the dynamic presence of Wisdom which resides on some exalted level of existence we know nothing about.

For many years, an organization known as World Goodwill has suggested Noon (local time) on Wednesday everywhere in the world as a time for offering up prayers and healing thoughts regarding the empowerment of goodwill throughout humanity and Planet Earth. Noon Wednesday is the heart or center of the 168-hour week that begins at Mid-night Sunday and ends at 11:59:59PM on Saturday night. If you want to increase the positive voltage of goodwill energizing our globe, this is one way you can be of service to our struggling Spaceship Earth. The work of World Goodwill is basically an expression of what has been termed "The Will-to-Good:" an extremely dynamic celestial force that is connected to Shamballa ("The Center Where the Will of God is Known"), a repository of cosmic Willpower and Purpose that guides the Earth as a planetary school and eventually filters down into the "crown chakras" of men and women around the world.

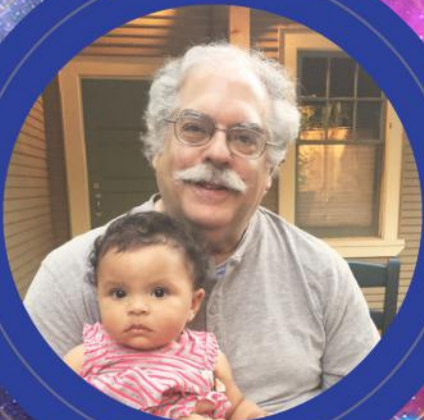

Good: Its Spiritual Reality and Earthly Presence

Finally, I do feel that people can "magnetically attract" good fortune to themselves through their value systems, positive thinking and mental "altitude." They may be born with a prominent Jupiter at birth or be in the right place, at the right time, in the right state of consciousness. But then again, you have to ask: Do we live in a universe of accidents, chance and unconscious fate or in a world of purpose, determination and the triumph of Good over Evil or Ignorance? Perhaps the answer lies in the state of consciousness developed by each individual.

When a person "wakes up" to his or her higher calling or planetary destiny, when such an individual realizes that he or she is here, on this planet, with a deliberate mission and an opportunity to be of service, when that personality begins to be over-lighted by the Soul (the Angel of the Presence) and when the "Rainbow Bridge" linking personality and soul, Earth and Heaven, is actively being built, then a person can become a true emissary of Goodwill and, eventually, via group work, be a lightning rod for the subtle yet incredibly potent energy of the Will-to-Good that ultimately will transfigure our planet in a positive manner over the centuries.

Explore the Good. The more you think about it, the more your heart opens to it, the more real it will become in your life. Good Luck!

Episode 1

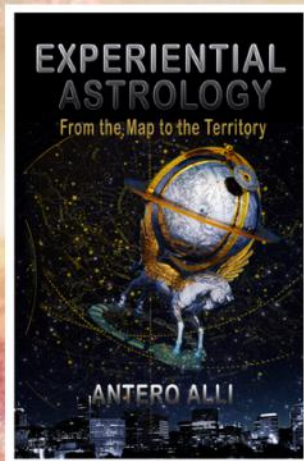

Out of Bounds: Two Guys Talking Sports & Astrology is a podcast with hosts Wayne Moody and Mark Lerner, designed and produced by Katya Juliet Lerner. The first official recording occurred on Sunday August 7, 2022 under auspicious celestial vibrations although they had experienced several dozen eclectic and synchronistic discussions by phone during the previous 3 – 4 years. The podcast – which might last for 20 minutes to 90 minutes – is an unscripted and a spontaneous interchange between these two professional astrologers and life-long sports enthusiasts and active players. If you are familiar with TV shows like At the Movies, Crossfire, Pardon the Interruption and Undisputed, then you will enjoy the blend of humor and serious subject matter, and how the celestial sphere suddenly swoops into the many fields of dreams we associate with the athletic realm and the profound social changes occurring every day around the globe.

VIBRATIONAL MAGIC

A PERSONAL STORY

by Isha Lerner

Magnetic energy ~ Devic Consciousness ~ a quickened magnetic field of higher vibrational energy and light ~ Subtle matter ~ astral matter ...all fields of vibration are magnetic and expansive. Movement at this level is relatively fluid compared to the dense physical plane. The slower moving, dense physical matter is referred to as the Atomic Plane. The quicker moving matter can be considered the Devic Realm, or simply Higher Vibrational Energy. Our universal template is composed of multi-dimensional consciousness from angels, plant devas, flowers, sound, color, and the magnetic force field.

This quickened magnetic field is pure energy and light, and it is Soul Awakening, and I believe it to be a royal gift of multi-dimensional Truth.

I'd like to share a very real experience. Among other intervening experiences...this one is most special.

It is 1990 and I just arrived at the coast in Oregon where I will continue to write the text for Inner Child Cards. My cabin rests on a cliff overlooking the Pacific Ocean. I recall the force of elemental intrusion that had shocked me out of my sleep the last time I stayed there. I lay my bags and books on a table and arrange my writing desk just the way I want it. I put away the groceries that I brought for my two-week writing retreat. I can't say why, but I lie down on the bed in this one room cabin and fall asleep. In my sleep I am once again ruffled as if someone is on the bed with me... I resist, and then I feel surrender...soon I am embraced in a sphere of blue, a blue I cannot describe, and will never see again. The blue sphere becomes smaller and smaller until it is a jeweled dot of energy and then, I am in it. I am zinging about the room with quick and blissful movement. I fly over the ocean and then back again to my room. I also know, simultaneously, I am lying on my bed. The duality of this reality does not disturb me. When I return to my body it is a soft landing and these words are heard, " You have just experienced the joy of the universe. It is a permanent force of light that you may tap into whenever you wish.

It will never betray you."

My life felt different from that day on...Awakened, I take a long walk on the beach and I am certain I saw a mermaid sitting on a rock that day.

Finding our way through life changing events can prove enchanting and mysterious, offering opportunity to explore the responsibility of what it means to embody a mystical experience. I've understood in my life that I must align my life so as not to get carried away by the awe of these experiences, instead, actualize the gift of this physical life. True knowledge can only live within the individual when, alongside the aspirations for higher consciousness, a full measure of willingness to fulfill a destiny is sought.

A journey into elemental consciousness can be life changing. When we become kindred with the light of vibrational energy, something shifts deeply within the cellular body. It is a visceral experience. It will enchant the soul forever.

I urge everyone who has had a mystical experience to honor your own Truth. Remain humble and full of gratitude...allow this special gift to assist your Human Experience.

REGULATING FIRE AND WATER IN THE TEMPLE BODY

by Dr. Jennifer McCollum

Fire and water have a delicate balance in nature and within our bodies. Fire in the body is the energy molecule called ATP or adenosine triphosphate. You can think of ATPs as miniature stars. ATPs allow us to think, move, digest, repair, and regulate our body temperature. Water naturally cools us or warms us depending on its temperature. It detoxes the body and creates flow wherever it is needed.

Water naturally runs down from the tops of mountains into streams, creeks, and rivers as it goes down to the sea. While the water tumbles over and between rocks, gravel and sand, it is purified and mineralized. The movement in a spiral torrent becomes hydrogenated, allowing the water to act as an antioxidant. Now the water has high energy and the ability to give life to the plants, animals, and humans that drink it. The hydrogen and oxygen molecules that form water help break down foods, create enzymes, and create the fire energy molecules ATP.

Featured Spotlight

But what causes water to be detrimental? When the water enters the municipalities, they screen it for bacteria and turgidity created by dirt molecules. The chemical used to kill off the bacteria, such as E. coli and other microbes, is chlorine. Fluorine is another gas that is infused into the water in some states in the U.S. to help prevent tooth decay.

Unfortunately, these chemicals have a deleterious effect on the thyroid gland because the negatively charged moles of chlorine and fluorine can displace the iodine the thyroid needs to make its' hormone thyroxine. When thyroxine is not functioning accurately, the fire energy drops in all cells, and weight problems, depression, sleep issues, and skin and hair problems may develop.

You can ensure quality water for you and your loved ones by drinking water from steel or glass and avoiding plastic bottles that leach chemicals into your drinking water. At the very least, get a Brita filter for filtering your water.

Leaving water out overnight or boiling water allows the chlorine and fluorine to release as a gas, so you are not consuming it. Water filters for the house and refrigerators are another way to filter out chemicals.

Water helps to hydrate all cells and carries the minerals, vitamins, and protein molecules known as amino acids and essential fatty acids into the blood. The energy and electrical signaling throughout the nervous system smoothly flow by water. Wastes are taken out of the body by water, facilitating detoxification. Water must cleanse and maintain pressure for clear eyesight free of floaters, dryness, cataracts, and glaucoma. Water also helps float the crystalline hairs in the inner ear, which gives us hearing and balance.

A banner with a dark, starry background. On the left is a large, glowing yellow full moon with the letters 'ACS' in a bold, serif font across its center. To the right of the moon, the text '"WHEN IT COMES TO ASTROLOGY, WE WROTE THE BOOK"' is written in a white, serif font. Below this text is the website address 'www.astrocom.com' in a smaller, white, sans-serif font. The banner is decorated with various zodiac symbols (Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces) and a hand cursor icon pointing towards the website address. The overall aesthetic is mystical and celestial.

Featured Spotlight

The ringing of the ears or tinnitus can be due to a lack of hydration, causing these hairs to fall over or rub against each other. Constipation is another sign of dehydration because the body absorbs as much water from the stool as possible to get the water to run its systems.

It is great to have a glass of water when you feel hungry because our bodies often signal a craving for food that is actually for water. Drink a glass of water, wait 20-30 minutes, and if the hunger goes away, it is just a call for water. Now that the water has been drunk, the body has what it needs to help break down food molecules.

There are two inappropriate times to drink water. Drinking lots of water or fluids at mealtime dilutes the fire energy of digestion. Diluted stomach acids make it harder for the body to break down and absorb nutrients. Water dampening the fire energy of digestion makes it more likely to get acid indigestion. Acid indigestion occurs because the water or other liquids float the digestive acids on top, causing burping or acid reflux. The additional time to not drink a lot of water or fluids is the first hour or two after eating, depending on how fast you digest a meal, because this may also dilute the enzymes and cause gas and bloating.

The fire energy of digestion can be increased by warming or heating foods and herbs such as garlic, chili peppers, black pepper, onion, chives, ginger, cinnamon, peppermint, spearmint, and sage. These foods and herbs have fire energy that also warms the body and can dry up damp conditions such as runny noses, moist coughs, and congestion in the throat or lungs.

The fire energy that is regulated by the thyroid controls our metabolism and body temperature. We get thyroxine from the thyroid, which helps all our cells function more easily at making the ATP energy molecule. This ATP fire energy controls the signaling of our nerves to move our muscles according to our mind's orders and allows our souls to create on this plane of existence as we choose.

Our energetic brain is like a car engine; it needs the radiator's coolant to keep it from overheating. Water cools and floats our brain in its skull, allowing us to utilize its vast calculating and creative abilities. We can improve our brain's cognition by feeding it some energizing herbs such as; rosemary, bacopa, and lemon balm that all fire up awareness. Make tea with these herbs, and you will utilize the water element to further the fire element within your mind. The energy we refer to as light is the fire element that cognizes inspiration and insights and forms the energy bodies of our chakras, meridians, and aura energy systems.

MARK LERNER'S COSMIC KALENDAR

Future Shock: August 24, September 9 & October 9

Wednesday August 24 As this potent 24-hour time-period begins, be aware that the Moon in Cancer makes a supportive, 60-degree alliance with Mercury in Virgo (2:41am) – a literary-educational boost, but which also starts a void lunar zone that lasts until the Moon enters fiery Leo (6:10am). Only 45 minutes later, Uranus halts its direct motion in the heavens at 19 degrees of Taurus (6:55am). Anticipating a calm and tranquil day when Uranus is officially stationary is not realistic. Focus attention on the following major themes of Uranus – surprises, revolution and radical change, intuition, eccentricity, the multi-media and high technology, advances in science and industry, aviation and space travel, the occult and metaphysics, jokers and wild cards, drawing outside the box, anxiety and the nervous system, upheavals and anarchy.

(Uranus remains in retrograde motion until January 22, 2023 when it will stop again to go direct at 15 degrees of Taurus.) Love vibrations rise in frequency as Venus in Leo makes a harmonious trine to shaman-mentor Chiron in Aries (10:32am) while later on your optimistic demeanor is empowered as the Moon trines Jupiter in Aries (9:12pm). Go over contracts and documents with an eagle eye as Mercury in Virgo forms an adjustment-requiring, 150-degree tie to Vesta backpedaling in Aquarius (8:42pm). [Note to readers: All times are calculated for Pacific Daylight Time. Be sure to adjust all times according to your own local time so the alignments noted above will be exact for your location.]

COSMIC KALENDAR

Friday September 9 Before we reach tomorrow's profound and enlightening Full Moon — energizing 18 degrees of Virgo and Pisces at 3am — the universe has a lot of intensity and trickery up its sleeve. Pisces Moon provides support for compassionate acts and empathic feelings for the truly needy. This will be magnified during the monthly lunar union with peace-and-harmony advocate Juno at 9:34pm. However, overdoing a good thing can send you on a cosmic detour since love-goddess Venus in Virgo forms an oblique, 150-degree link to King of the Gods Jupiter retrograde in Aries (3:08pm). Do your best to maneuver a potent, 135-degree link between Mars in Gemini and Pluto in Capricorn (10:42pm) away from discord and toward increased self-confidence. The main celestial headline concerns Messenger of the Gods planet Mercury halting its forward progress and making a station at 9 degrees of Libra to go into reverse at 8:39pm. Focus attention on the following major mercurial themes — communication, learning and primary education, words and language, transportation and travel plans, business and trade, messages and paperwork, health and medical concerns, the five senses, air and breathing, wind and temperature changes, as well as acts of apparent magic, sleight of hand, and theft. Don't fall prey to bogus claims and hoodwinking endeavors that will end with regret. Mercury stays retrograde until October 2 when it will stop again to go direct at 25 degrees of Virgo. [Note to readers: All times are calculated for Pacific Daylight Time. Be sure to adjust all times according to your own local time so the alignments noted above will be exact for your location.]

research and in-depth studies to your advantage, but say no to projecting anger on to well-meaning friends and family. Love vibrations, healing forces, strategic thinking and problem-solving are all being energized by today's illuminating Full Moon — activating 17 degrees of Libra and Aries at 1:56pm. Individual and group meditations are advised. Send out your nurturing thoughts, prayers and affirmations to dear ones and associates far and wide, and to Mother Earth and her realms of nature. The main reason this monthly solar-lunar crescendo is extra strong is due to a Venus-Neptune parallel (2:19am), the monthly Moon conjunction with shaman-mentor Chiron in Aries (9:32am), plus Pallas Athena in Cancer forming a supportive, 60-degree alliance with the fate-destiny strong Mean Lunar North Node in Taurus (2:43pm). Get set for the revelatory and uplifting annual Venus-Chiron polarity tomorrow morning. [Note to readers: All times are calculated for Pacific Daylight Time. Be sure to adjust all times according to your own local time so the alignments noted above will be exact for your location.]

by Katya Juliet Lerner

As a child I remember driving from Oregon to California with my family in the car, windows down, with hot air blasting in our faces. Mid way through our travels we would stop in a small town to stretch our legs, fill the car up with gas and eat a snack. That small town also had a quaint little bookstore and that bookstore sold “Choose Your Own Adventure” stories, where you are the star of the story.

As the reader, you got to choose at the end of each chapter what the story did next and then skip to that section of the book to find out what happens based on your choice. It was so much fun getting to participate in the outcome and not just being stuck reading a story without any input.

Making choices was thrilling. Part of the excitement as children growing up is that one day we get to start making our own independent decisions. We empower our children by letting them choose one of two options in an effort to help guide them.

But then we grow up, and decisions become something that feels hard, and often times we want to run away from the responsibility of it all.

I was talking with a good friend the other day who was struggling to make an important decision. "I just wish I didn't have to choose. I want someone else to decide for me," she said.

I have heard that said before by others and I'm pretty sure that I have said it too. It is because we can easily feel overwhelmed with the amount of choices and decisions we are faced with throughout our lives and on a daily basis.

But the power of choice and taking ownership of our path is the most thrilling and critical part of our achievements in life and we have to learn to separate the burn-out and burden of deciding what's for dinner and the profound blessing we have to think independently and follow our own path and destiny.

If life were completely destined and our choices did not matter, life would lose meaning. If we only took a reactive path, our life would feel chaotic and out-of-control. If we only took a predictable path, our life would feel boring and pointless.

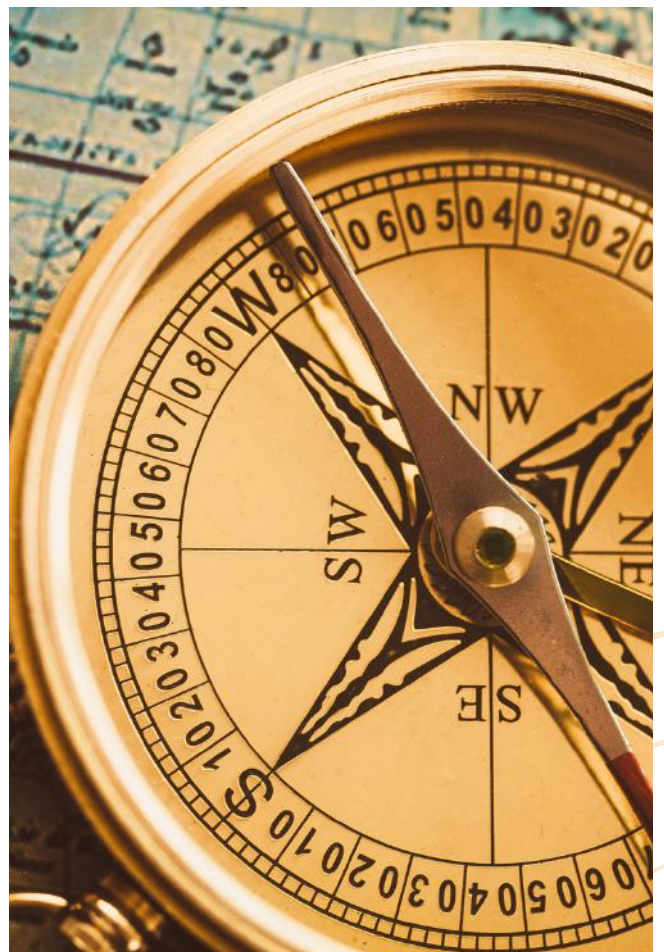

Part of what makes us unique is our ability to choose and part of what helps people literally survive on this earth and not give up is our ability decide who, what, where, when and why.

So why would any of us want to give that up?

Because it's hard. Most people do not get a formal education on how to make good decisions and it doesn't always come naturally.

We are emotional creatures and our choices affect other people around us. It feels hard to make a choice that may emotionally hurt another person. It also feels hard to make a decision that could possibly cause ourselves to feel pain. It feels hard when we can't accurately predict the future or total outcome. Making our own choices means taking risks and taking an adventure to an unknown destination.

Further, if we were to let go of the opportunity to choose and give up on that adventure - allowing others to make our decisions for us - then what's the point of life?

Sometimes it feels easier to wish and hope for a sign of what to do, but they won't always come. I once prayed for someone to show up at my front door and hand me the manual to my life, telling me exactly how to fix something...willing to forego my free-will all together

Getting the answers handed to you essentially ends the adventure of life and can contribute to losing your desire to build and thrive over time and the inevitable outcome would be victimhood, depression and confusion.

By making choices, we claim the driver's seat in the car of our lives. We live empowered and free.

So, the question is - how can we make this process of making important decisions feel a little less hard?

The answer is with practice, honesty and self-awareness.

First, try to indicate whether this choice has to be governed by your mind or your heart.

Even if you consider yourself someone who is guided more by one or the other, you cannot let both of them take priority at the same time. The mind/heart clash is part of the struggle in the first place and one will always have to take the lead.

To take that challenge off your plate the first action is to write an inventory list of your values in your life, in order, as they are now. Not the values you were told to care about as a child. Not the values you think you should care about - your own core values right now.

Katya Juliet Lerner

This will help you determine whether this decision requires more of your logical mind or more of your emotional heart and soul.

Next, try writing down a list including your ultimate goal related to the issue / decision and write down your:

- Top 3 priorities in life now
- Top 3 priorities in life future
- Top 2 obstacles
- Fears
- Feelings and emotions

After you create your list, evaluate it.

What does the list tell you? Does it help you move in one direction over another? Were you honest or did you catch yourself writing down what you think you should feel and not what you really feel? (A common trap)

It might take you a few tries to get your list painfully honest.

Our personal values inventory evolves as we move throughout different stages of our lives so it is important to check-in and see what has changed. Often our decisions align with what values are prioritized in that moment of our life.

If you are still struggling after your list, I recommend a daydream, if you will. Play out the situation two different ways. What does the effect of your decision one way or another look like? How does it sound? How do others react? How does it make you feel? Do you like it? Where do you end up?

Communication is not just an important skill set with others. You communicate with yourself 24/7, consciously and unconsciously. And how you communicate with yourself is critical.

Is your tone typically negative and pessimistic? Encouraging and supportive? Worried and stressed?

Talking, writing and drawing yourself through various feelings and obstacles can help you get out from feeling stuck and back on the road to making key choices that will get you closer to the life of your dreams.

But, then, there is another element at play. The fear of regret and the fear of missing out. This is the kind of fear and worry that keeps us in a state of paralysis when needing to make an important choice. But what if the biggest regret of your life ended up not being because of a choice you made, but rather from your inability to make choices along the way and letting fear and worry get the best of you?

Non-action, while it could technically be considered a choice, is really you just sitting idly by, letting the world around you affect your life over and over.

Make a choice. Be bold and courageous. Be adventurous. I'm not saying you have to live a wild life. Life can be adventurous and simple at the same time. It just has to be yours. You have to own it. You GET to own it though a series of choices. You get to be the star in the story of you.

ALL WE KNOW OF HEAVEN

All We Know Of Heaven

When I was small my father carried me down steep and rocky paths to lakes, rivers and the sea. Bodies of water became like second homes during my youth. Nothing Mother Nature could proffer quelled the quiet assurance I experienced in his loving arms. I don't remember ever hearing the words from him, but the gentle manner in which he'd scoop me up whenever the way ahead became remotely dangerous, was love expressed to me. Growing up in the 1950s and 60s in rural Oregon was paradise. No matter what Dad pursued - piloting our boat, dancing with Mom, repairing vehicles, water skiing or awaiting a pitch during casual neighborhood baseball games, he exuded strength and earned the respect of everyone around him. I believed there wasn't anything he couldn't accomplish.

Water was the key element in which my dynamic father dwelled. We boated, kayaked, swam and floated our way throughout the Northwest. We scampered in the ocean waves, climbed up dunes and slid back down them on our backsides. I enjoyed watching my father take part in our activities as much as the antics themselves. It made me so happy to see our sometimes stern father laugh and play like a child. Occasionally, Dad would take me by the hand and walk with me along the docks, pointing out how the boats were constructed and their operation. He served in the Navy during WWII as a tail gunner on the battleship, Manila Bay. He never spoke of it, but when I was about 7, I found his mariner's journal and read of his harrowing experiences during some of the terrible battles of the South Pacific and was so disturbed to think he narrowly even made it home from that war. I don't know if I came to love the water through him or if it was a natural inclination for me as well, but any activity on or near it was always a pleasure for me. We slept on the ground and feasted on the fish my father caught. I believed that the future was full of potential, but those blissful trips to the waterways of Oregon are seen now through a curtain of pain.

That quiet confidence I enjoyed while young has sometimes eluded me in my adult life. The way seems often fraught with perilous events and relationships. We were raised up to be self-reliant, never complain and to take what comes with a measure of grace. I've tried to follow those principles, but often fall short. In the dark of night, when the trials of the day come to taunt me, I visualize my father picking me up. It's remarkable, but I can still see and smell him. His scent was a pleasant potpourri of machinery, strong soap and the woods. I was always watching him, all the little details, gestures and mannerisms I recall now with piercing lucidity. A family member once said, "You came into this world loving your father."

For the most part, I keep this knowledge to myself. Few want to hear about the departed. An abyss of grief has confronted me for more than 40 years. It is an impenetrable void from which I can find no way across. I think it's possible to love someone too much. But how does a child know to maintain affections in moderation? It is only in the hard, cold plane of adulthood that such restraint is honed. Tennyson posed that "It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all" ...but I wonder.

All We Know Of Heaven

One day in July 1967, the Pacific took my beloved father's vital life and with it, all the security I would ever know. Troubled thoughts come unbidden surrounding my father's untimely passing. I see him, struggling against the waves and I am lost. In those last moments, was he thinking of us, those whose lives which would be so dramatically altered by the ending of his? Did he think of me, his raven-haired daughter who shadowed him in life? These are questions with no answers. Our family drifted in the savage current of life for years; appalling experiences befell us all. There were no "grief counselors" or help from any quarter. The one bright spot I focused most of my energy on during that shadowy time was my little sister Lisa, not yet 3 when our vibrant father's life ended. Sometimes, I think she came into the world to help us all cope with the tragedy soon to come. She has remained a constant source of sunshine in our sometimes dark, familial world. Eventually, most of my remaining family grounded themselves in the earth with productive and fulfilling lives. I've always worked, managed to stay solvent, maintained enduring friendships and had my own small family, but I never truly came ashore.

I avoid weddings and large gatherings, especially those with pairs of loving parents or anything involving fathers dancing with or celebrating their daughters. I don't covet what they have in any way; it just reminds me of what we lost. My father is like a ghost. There have been many nights when I have awoken from a deep sleep, hearing my father's voice simply saying my name, nothing more, just my name. I awaken, "Dad, Dad, are you here?" Only the echo of his nocturnal summons hangs in the air. His voice, like everything else about him, was very distinctive. He has been the most frequent subject in my dreamscape since his death. Some nighttime expeditions are great; I'm on a quest to find him. When I finally do, he sees me and folds me into his arms. I'm so excited to bring him home to my siblings, my mother – inexpressible joy.

When I wake, of course, I realize it was only a dream, and the day is usually a gray one, regardless of the weather. My objective in these dreams is always the same. I desperately want to re-connect with him, talk with him, see his beautiful face, but more than anything, tell him how much he was, and is, loved. In so many of the dreams, I discover him somewhere far from home, ranching in the southwestern desert, building bridges in some faraway city or working in a fishing community on the eastern seaboard. I rush up to him with such elation. He sees me as a stranger. I remind him who I am (since I'm older now than when he died) and how much I've missed him. My entreaties to make him understand, to recognize and claim me as his daughter fall on deaf ears. He doesn't care; he has a new family now, and doesn't have any recollection of being our patriarch and usually turns his back on me and walks away.

Dreams of the latter variety are so painful I feel myself elevating, flying like a bird to escape the cruelty of his rejection.

All We Know Of Heaven

I'm far above him, his second family mere specks on the earth below. Some dreams are so powerful that they remain as memories with more clarity than waking life. One in particular - My once energetic father is alive but paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair. We are at a family outing up the North Umpqua River and everyone else is engaged in campsite activities. Dad is trying to gain everyone's attention, making all kinds of insightful suggestions about building the fire, setting up tents and other necessities. No one is paying him any mind. I am sitting on the ground at his side, my hand on his knee. He is getting very upset, "Why are they ignoring me?" he asks, exasperated. I try to reassure him, to comfort him. He keeps attempting to obtain their notice to no avail. Tears well up in his eyes. "Don't let it get to you, Dad, they love you, they just can't hear you," I tell him. "But you can," he replies. I nod and pat his knee. "Why do you suppose that is?" I ask. His answer is a simple one, "Nancy, it's because you're with me." I awoke in the middle of the night, feeling as if I had something far more powerful than a dream, more like a visitation.

As Father's Day looms, Melancholy - often whispering in my ear - sometimes gains an audience. I walk quickly past the store displays for "gift ideas" or avoid the shops altogether. Televised commercials intent on getting people to spend Father's Day dollars on their products are quickly muted. I don't begrudge others their celebratory day; I just don't want to think about it any more than my troubled mind can bear. Sometimes I imagine having him over for dinner, a beautiful meal, and all courses lovingly homemade by my hands. It saddens me that I never cooked for my father. Careless people complain about having to deal with elderly or cantankerous parents. I can't help think how much I'd be willing to sacrifice for the privilege of taking care of my father in his declining years. When I hear such banter, I want to scream - to rage.

And yet, I do nothing but stuff a lifetime of desolation a little farther within. Family members too young, or not yet conceived while my father was alive don't understand. They think I dwell too much. They have no idea.

My maternal grandmother guided me into the world of poetry at an early age. She departed this life 2 years before my father. I discovered Emily Dickinson while most of my peers were beginning to discover boys. A line from one of my favorites, "Parting is all we know of heaven, and all we need of hell" resonated profoundly following Dad's demise. Circumstances were certainly all we needed of hell for many years. Often it feels like I'm only here as a half-person. The other portion of myself was buried in the ground with my father. I was only 14, but I felt a tangible departure from deep within as they lowered his casket in the ground. There is no way to convey such despondency, I believe only those who've experienced similar loss can comprehend it.

A man, who would go on to become my closest friend, imparted his first impression of our meeting almost 20 years ago. He said he recognized and was drawn to the sadness in my eyes. I was both moved and surprised. I thought I managed to cover it fairly well. He's a sensitive soul, but I had no idea that my quiet despair was evident to anyone.

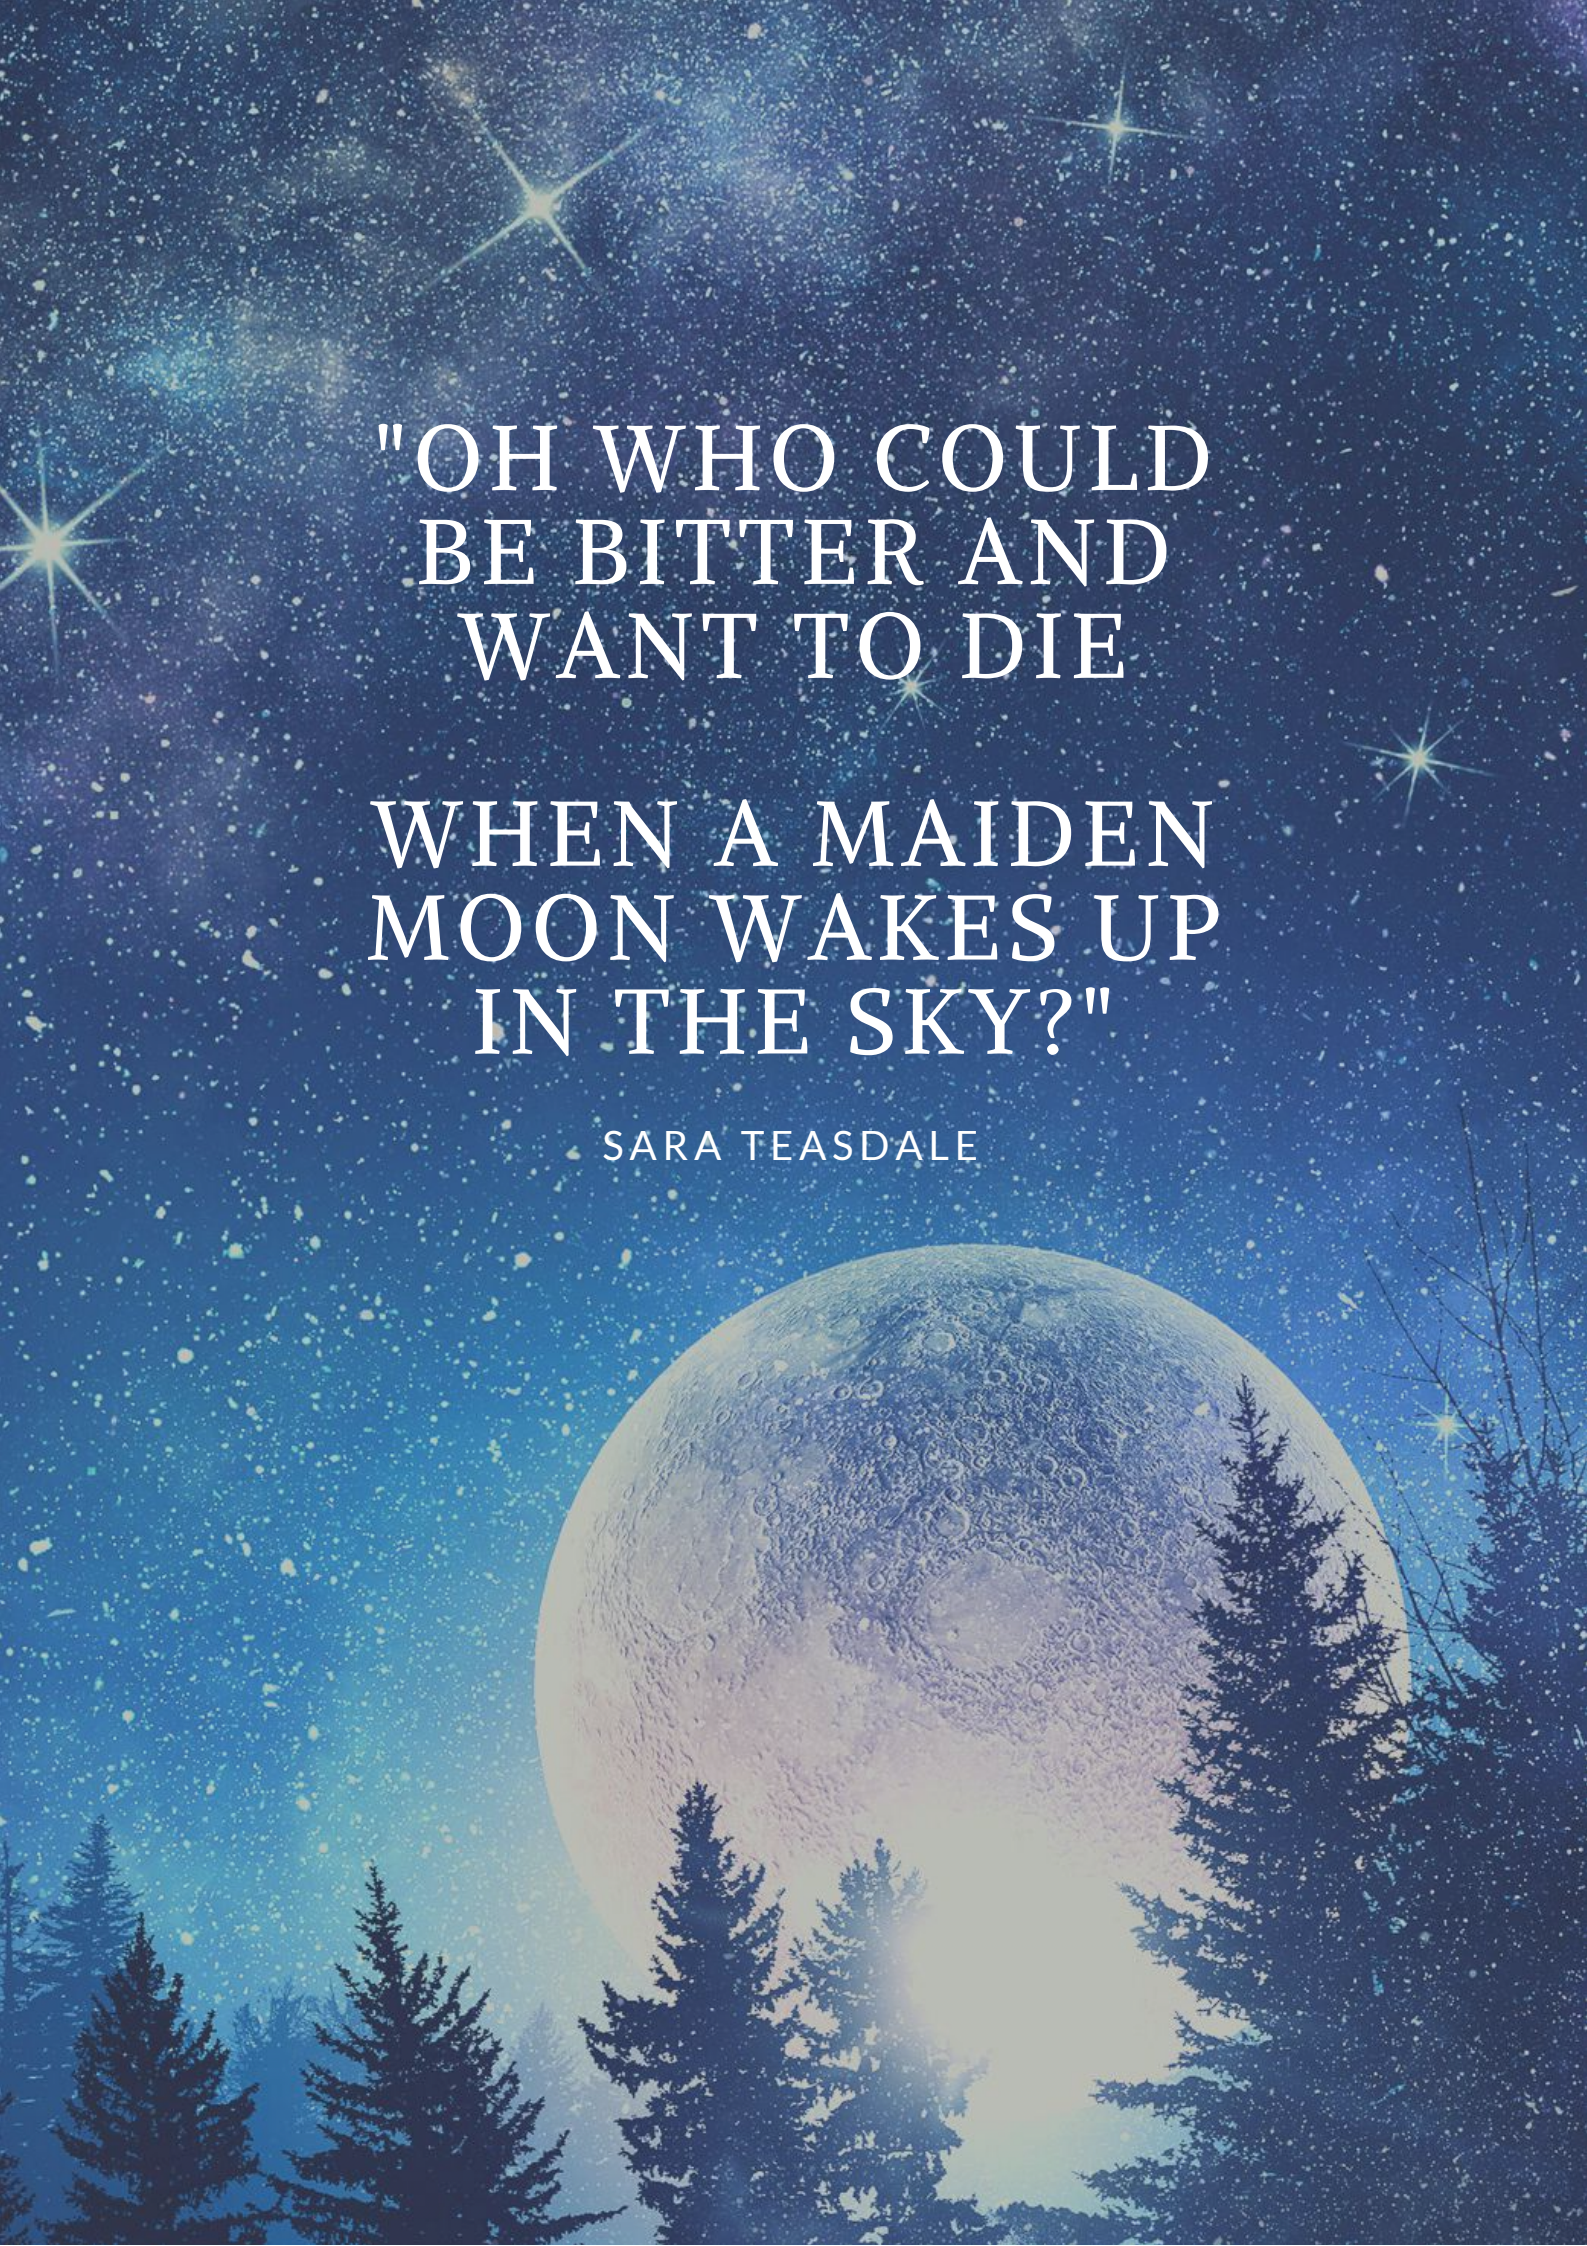

The solitary benefit that emerged from all this is I have learned to find happiness in small doses. Little victories, pleasant exchanges, the beauty of nature and the affection shared with family and friends are precious to me. I love and have loved many others on this journey, but I keep myself in check. I turn the damaged side of my heart inward. I persevere, but self-possessed. I wouldn't have wanted any other family and certainly any other father, but sometimes I think perhaps it's not better to have loved and lost. Sometimes. My father carried me when I was small and I will carry him in my heart until I take my last breath.

MERCURY LOGOSIS AND THE VENUSIAN DILEMMA

Excerpt From Experiential Astrology by Antero Alli

Mercury Logosis

This technique requires a discernment between what we know (Mercury) and who we are (Sun), between the idea-generating intellect of Mercury and the Sun as the mystery of being. Natal Mercury is placed either one sign behind the Sun, in the same sign as the Sun, or one sign ahead of the Sun. When Mercury is one sign behind the Sun, it can suggest a weaker capacity to articulate oneself. Finding words to explain or describe our perspective may be challenging, or maybe slower than we'd like it to be. This may not indicate a lower I.Q., but rather an innate sense that one's ideas are somehow behind one's being. It can be like understanding something without knowing it as firsthand experience. With this Logosis, there can also be a nostalgia for the past or a thinking and speaking style that favors the past tense.

When Mercury is in the same sign as the Sun, there can be an identification with ideas, a process accentuated when Sun and Mercury are conjunct in the same sign. I think therefore I am. This can be a challenging position when others critique our ideas and sources of information, and "being in and of itself remains beyond criticism as it inhabits a singular point beyond dualistic thinking. The Mercury/Sun conjunction can symbolize the mental habit for confusing our ideas for who we are.

When Mercury is placed in the sign ahead of the Sun, the intellect tends towards more forward-thinking without the mental baggage of identifying with any ideas it entertains. Ideas are viewed as autonomous agencies agencies that light and leave, from mind to mind, like honeybees over fields of clover. There can be instances of prescience and even prophecy with this placement, where future outcomes can be seen and predicted.

The Venusian Dilemma

The placement of natal Venus determines how the magnetic force of personal love can be experienced. The experience of love to one person can be something else altogether to another, depending on the style and state Venus is in. This difference of Venusian styles can account for misunderstandings and conflicts in relationships where either party insists that their notion and definition of love is more valid than the other's. Love can be so dogmatic at times. Natal Venus is always placed either one or two signs behind the Sun, in the same sign. Those with the Venusian Dilemma of Sun conjunct Venus may first have to realize a higher level of self-acceptance and self-love before feeling ready to share their love with another. When Venus is in the same sign as the Sun, the affectionate nature can be embodied as charm, charisma, grace and animal magnetism. This becomes more evident with tighter Sun/Venus conjunctions. This conjunction can represent the experience of being the love that you seek.

When Venus is ahead of the Sun by one or two signs, affections may be quicker to rise into expression. The dilemma for such a person and for their beloved can occur if the former expects the latter to match their own quick to affection responses. Those with Venus ahead of the Sun may fall quicker in love and maybe faster than the beloved can reciprocate; frustrations and misunderstandings ensue.

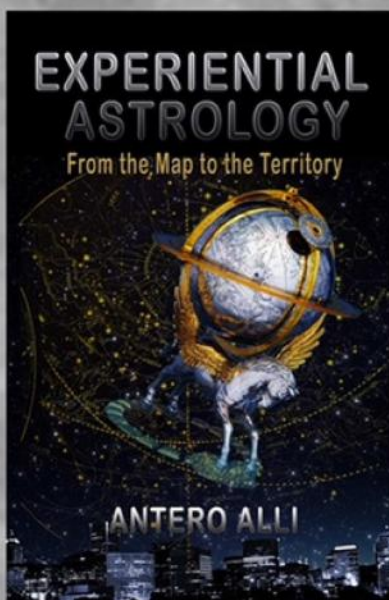

Overall, the Venusian Dilemma testifies to how each person can know and experience love differently and with its own distinct sense of timing and expression. It can also show how love can deepen and mature as differences are accepted, embraced and celebrated between friends, lovers and others.

SUN STORMS

by Michael Erlewine

Can you imagine what pours through our mindstream (stream of consciousness) even in a single day? Mind stream? It's more like a mind river or at times even a storm surge. And what remains? Not much, some impressions and selected memories, all in a day.

Those memories, however, are not all nostalgia either. We equally are imprinted by or remember the good, the bad, and the ugly. And the tip-of-the-top, the 'best of the lot' of memories, whether loved or hated, are reserved for the museum of our Self. And then there are the fixations.

As I like to say, attachment is the glue that holds the self together, and if something really impacts us, for better or for worse, it becomes part of our Self and we begin to identify with it as "us." And that, my friends, is sticky. Again, don't fool yourself into thinking that our self is made up only of treasured or much-loved moments. It is not about nostalgia. Once we identify with something, good or bad (and it is up to us), it goes into the closet of the Self and remains there until its memory is worn out of existence or we can release it. And that can be a long time. Like a sore tooth, we keep peeking (by reaction) to see if it is still sensitive, and that is what keeps it forever on our mind. We further underscore it every time it comes up and we react. This is the nature of the Self.

And the key to freedom from self-dependence, is the fact that the Self is composed of many distinct impressions and is not simply a unified whole entity like we imagine. Like the seeds in a sunflower, and there are many, each of our reactions is a separate seed or impression. Because the self is blind and has no overview of its own "self" (meaning that it is not an entity), it can be successfully deconstructed one memory at a time. This is the beauty of the dharma practice called Tonglen that I have been describing in "Tonglen: The Alchemy of Reaction"

DOWNLOAD

As mentioned, the Self is not of one piece (there is no Over-Self), and the individual pieces that make up the Self are not of the same degree of imprint. Some are stronger or deeper, while others are lighter and weaker. And we don't have to go searching through our self for ways to liberate it; not at all.

Instead, the only requirement for self-liberation (or whatever we can agree to call it) is to develop a little awareness, which simply means to become more aware of what comes to our attention throughout the day. That is all we have to do to begin unraveling the Self.

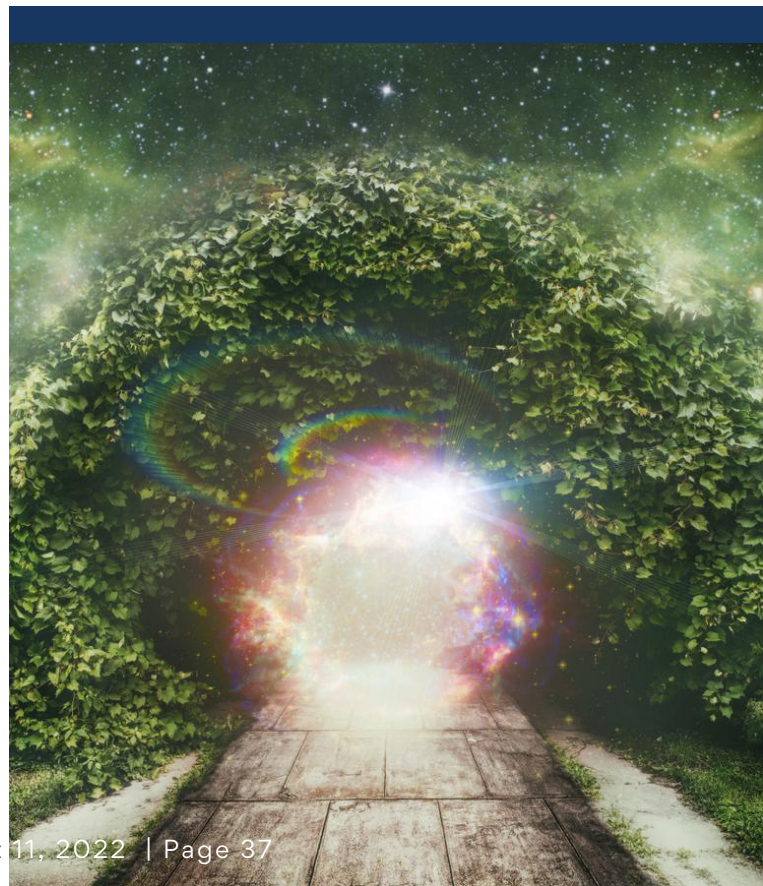

Every reaction that we have is based on something we have previously identified-with enough to register or log it into our Self as good, bad, or indifferent. So, when we bump into that attachment again on the road of life and react, just look at the reaction and do some Reaction Tonglen with it. Tonglen is as simple as acknowledging the reaction, accepting it as our own projection, embracing or taking it in as ours, and then just dropping it in response. In other words, make peace with your own reactions.

Tonglen is the Mahayana Buddhist practice for the type of self-liberation practice described here, while in Vajrayana Buddhism, another form of meditation practice is used called Mahamudra.

As pointed out, we don't have to dig in or hunt through the memory-collection of the Self for sensitive hotspots to do Reaction Tonglen with. It is enough to just relax and allow the self to bring events to mind, one reaction at a time as our day unfolds. Just watch the show. With our perpetual fountain of reactions, we can undo attachment to the Self one response at a time.

Of course this may take quite a while, but we can mix this practice with our daily routine. In fact, that is the preferred way to do it, like: all day long. As each reaction comes to mind, as we are aware that we are reacting, we just neutralize it with some Reaction Tonglen to take the starch out of it, a reaction at a time.

Sure, some deep identifications will take repeated treatment, perhaps even months or years, but by attending to the reactions that bloom in the moment, gradually, like a glacier melts, we will reduce the frozen mass of the self to something manageable, and it will thin out and become transparent.

Michael Erlewine

Our goal is not to deny or get rid of our self. The Buddhists say that can't be done anyway, because we would just have to go out and invent another personal assistant to help us get through the day. The Self is a necessary middleman but does not have to get in the way.

What we want to do is tone down the attachment to the Self, thin it out until it is no longer an obstacle, and does not stand in our way. In time the Self will become transparent, and we can gradually see through it and begin to identify with the awareness beyond and behind it. Our innate awareness surrounds the Self, and not vice-versa.

As an added bonus, concurrent with this process of deconstructing the Self, we end up transferring our consciousness from the Self and learn to identify with the pure awareness that is our mind, rather than with the composite-self that we have created and drawn around us. In fact, the deconstructing of the Self is simultaneous with our taking up the vantage point of a more pure awareness. That is the process of enlightenment.

VESTA: PART III VESTA (AND PALLAS) STATIONARY IN PISCES

by Eleanor Bach

Eleanor Bach

Publisher's Note: Eleanor Bach was my main female teacher of astrology when I began my studies in 1972-1973 in NYC. I went to her home every month in lower-Manhattan to hear and learn from her Pearls of Wisdom. This third in a series of Vesta features she contributed to my Welcome to Planet Earth astrology magazine appeared in our Virgo 1993 issue – from 29 years ago. The reason I am re-publishing it now is that Vesta is once again in Pisces, has just made a station, and her voice and knowledge echoes in our consciousness one Saturn cycle after this feature was first read by our readers and subscribers around the world. Another reason is because of who Eleanor Bach was as a pioneer in our field to so many students of astrology and that she was my teacher and friend, and eventually a colleague who wrote many articles on all the four main asteroids back in the 1990s in WTPE before her untimely passing. I am also including her timed birth chart with this feature. While as we publish our first GPS Astrology magazine in the summer of 2022 Pallas is in Gemini, on the last day of August Pallas in Gemini will make an exact harmonious trine to a retrograding Vesta in Aquarius. On October 5, Vesta will make a direct station at 23 degrees of Aquarius and then Vesta will re-enter Pisces on November 20 and remain in the twelfth sign of the zodiac until February 7, 2023. One more personal note. My mother was born in NYC on January 11, 1919 and Eleanor Bach was born on the same day three years later in 1922.

--Mark Lerner, August 2022

Planets represent very specific principles of energy. For instance (and very briefly): Mars represents action and initiative, the onset or start of things. Venus represents reception and passivity, the conclusion or consummation of things. All of the other planets and asteroids represent various other kinds of activity. But, as we all know, the planets are mediated by, colored by the function of the signs through which they are passing, and therefore show the most amazingly different faces in each of the signs. It is as though there are 12 different Mars, 12 different Venuses, etc

Therefore the stations of the planets afford us an opportunity to study and observe a specific principle of energy (a planet or asteroid) and how it may manifest in a specific sign. That is because the planet having the station spends far more time in the sign wherein the station occurs than it would if it were merrily moving along at normal speed. This manifestation is clearest and most intense in the two or three weeks before and after the station. And, I might add, the very degree where the station occurs is sensitized in the nature of the planet that had the station, and that sensitivity will persist for many months. Aspects made by the other planets to that sensitive degree will stimulate the action and show a further development with regard to the issues that were in consciousness in the world at the times of the stations.

Since the Pallas Station June 26 in 11 Pisces 16 is so closely conjunct the degree of the Vesta Station July 12 in 12 Pisces 12, there will be a meshing of the Vesta and Pallas Principles. For one thing, the Pallas idea of better control and/or greater efficiency will be deeply involved with regard to all Vesta matters. But the ramifications are even greater than that.

Vesta in Pisces

Vesta, in the sign ruled by Neptune, will often manifest with an emphasis on security matters or matters of trust, having to do with: the church, nuns, the priesthood and with the priestly class of various other spiritual associations. There may be concern with regard to the wealth, assets and property of the church or sect.

Betrayal of the vow of celibacy among the religious could be an issue; what with the mushrooming realization that there is so much homosexuality and pederasty among the supposedly celibate, and with so many priests forsaking their calling in order to marry, it is becoming more and more difficult to get candidates for the priesthood in the Catholic Church. This abandonment of celibacy may be seen as a betrayal of spiritual trust; the disgusting abuse of young children by irresponsible priests certainly is.

We may see an intensification of conservative or fundamentalist religious sentiment among a variety of spiritual sects, clans, or groups. The moslems for instance. The Branch-Davidians? Spiritual security a concern. After all, religion is—after death insurance. With Vesta in Pisces, there may be a deep interest in spiritual truth.

"The abandonment of celibacy may be seen as a betrayal of spiritual trust; the disgusting abuse of young children by irresponsible priests certainly is."

I would expect there to be concern about safety with regard to chemicals, drugs. One would expect a greater emphasis on drug testing to assure the safety of certain therapeutic drugs. There should be increased investment in Chemicals, also Chemo-therapy may be significantly highlighted with this position of Vesta.

With the Pallas involvement, we may find incredible development in connection with the certification of vaccines or chemical aids to the immune system, and ingenuity and greater efficiency with regard to health and hospital insurance.

Have you noticed that the last station of Vesta was in 11 Virgo 15? Virgo is a sixth house sign; work and health. This station of Vesta is in Pisces, the twelfth house sign; hospitals and institutions. And this station in 12 Pisces 12 is barely a degree away from exact opposition to that last station of Vesta in 11 Virgo 15. Clearly we are getting signals that the issues of efficiency (Pallas) with regard to health (Virgo), hospitals (Pisces) and insurance (Vesta) are the big subjects on people's minds this year.

The Drug Tsar, and/or drug Mafia in the spotlight. (I believe a "Drug Tsar" has been appointed?) Pallas adds: Better use of Hi-Tech systems to control the drug problem; perhaps with regard to border patrol (Vesta is borders).

One of Vesta's negative manifestations is with regard to gangs. So many young men, children, boys and girls are banding together in gangs. These throw-away kids are more or less without families (Vesta, family, be-longing), and so they form a sort of family by becoming members of a gang.

They give themselves fancy names and wear uniforms.

They are immature, armed and lethal. They kill members of rival gangs, rivals over drug-turf. They are hoods, hoodlums. I have wondered where does the word "hood" come from? neighborhood? brotherhood? sisterhood? Actually "hood" seems to indicate whole categories or should we say "families" of things; childhood. priesthood, motherhood, etc. The gangsters of the thirties were called "Hoods." The hood, as an object, is a covering for the head, and so it may indicate the monk's cowl, as well as the peaked hood of the robes of the KKK. Count among these gangs, the "skin-heads;" racist groups which are also springing up in Europe as well as here. This gang-forming phenomenon is beginning to show up in unexpected places and to threaten peaceful law-abiding communities. An ominous and dangerous development, fascistic in nature. They are a law unto themselves. How sad it is that the really deep need these kids have for belonging, and to feel safe, sheltered and protected, is the motivating factor in the creation of these destructive gangs.

Safety at sea and in the air may be issues with Vesta in Pisces. [Marc Jones claimed that Neptune and Pisces have as much to do with air travel as with ships; in both cases control is turned over to the ship or airplane captain, and the travel is conducted along rivers or lanes of either water or air currents. Neptune and Pisces seem to have more to do with rivers on land and river-like currents in the oceans, while Cancer and the Moon have to do with vast oceans and tides.

A colleague of ours, Suzanne Gagne, pointed this out to me. One of the mythological stories associated with Neptune is that he contended with Pallas to be tutelary deity of Attica. Whoever produced the greater gift to the region would be chosen. Neptune struck the earth with his trident and produced a river. Pallas produced the olive and she won the contest, for the olive was judged to be the superior gift.

Airplane or ship building or shipping contracts may be important. I would also expect the testing and licensing of river and sea and air pilots and captains to be of interest to many people. With Pallas involved, air-traffic controllers may be being licensed. Also there may be improvements in the methods and techniques of air traffic control—and river control.

There may be much confusion about the integrity of certain borders and boundaries (Bosnia-Herzegovina?). The terrible flooding of the Mississippi has wiped out not only the borders of the shores of the rivers, but the borders of private property and of cities, even some State borders.] Pallas, by the way, is the engineer (in Pisces she is also the ship's pilot on rivers) and certainly, with all this flooding, river (Pisces) engineering (Pallas) has loomed as a major safety (Vesta) concern; Levees, dams, dikes, bridges.

Flooding and hurricane insurance important. Pallas may supply better and more efficient ways for citizens to be informed of and prepared for hurricanes, flooding; perhaps there will be hi-tech developments to facilitate such information.

Home (Vesta) on water (Pisces), near water. Lake or shore-side (Pisces) real estate (Vesta). House-boat (Vesta-Pisces) (yachts?). Off-shore water rights may be an issue. [Vesta is turf and, in Pisces, the turf is water.] Public or welfare (Pisces) housing (Vesta) —housing projects or help for the needy to purchase homes?

Water pollution and therefore water purification, water safety (Pisces-Vesta) an issue. Safety in water—lifeguard, life-vest or life-jacket. Investment in fish, seafood and the safety of fish or seafood for human consumption. Inspection of seafood to assure its suitability for sale.

Natural gas for fuel or heating could increase in significance. Pallas wants greater efficiency in the use of those materials.

Espionage and clandestine investigations involving the secret service agencies (Vesta) could be important. Since Pallas has so much to do with industry, industrial espionage may be an issue. Welfare for the needy. Efficiency with regard to welfare says Pallas. Investment in music, photography, film, dance. Great interest in the ethnic aspect of these Neptunian-Piscean arts, i.e., with Vesta in Pisces there was a show on Public Television about dance as it has taken form in many different cultures—ethnic dance; American Indian, Australian aborigine, Balinese, Japanese, certain African cultures, etc. The spiritual aspect of dance in various cultures was explored. There may be wonderful choreography as well as brilliant musical composition with Pallas involved.

Look for investment in cosmetics— Entrepreneurial investment in cosmetics, shipping, music, dance, etc.— says Pallas in Pisces.

by Pallas stationary in the very same degree.

So far this year Religious Sects have been issues: the Branch-Davidians, whose leader, David Koresh, finally on April 19 immolated himself and his followers pent up in that compound in Waco, Texas; Vesta was in Aquarius at the time, very appropriate for they were a group, and a weird one too, as Aquarius often is.

The Moslem sect responsible for bombing the 'Ruin Towers in New York, headed by the alleged terrorist and mastermind Sheik Rahman.

[By the way, Juno played a big part in this terrorist act and the above religious sect activity. Juno was exactly rising at the Twin Towers explosion.]

"This gang-forming phenomenon is beginning to show up in unexpected places and to threaten peaceful law-abiding communities. An ominous and dangerous development, fascistic in nature."

Health and hospital insurance of major significance with Hillary Clinton presenting her research with regard to same. The Catholic priesthood and child abuse are currently a big issue. Apparently the practice is quite widespread and the authorities in the Church simply slap the wrists of the abusers, move them to other venues where they eventually resume their monstrous activity until they are caught at it again. These are men who have not only broken their oath of chastity, but they are mindlessly ravaging the lives of the innocent children whom they should be protecting. They are not to be trusted.

Intensification of Nationalistic hostilities resulting in the ethnic cleansing in Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Mapmaking, re-defining of borders.

The issue of immigration with "boat people" sneaking into the country, or seeking sanctuary here for fear of abuse in their own homeland.

Eleanor Bach

Our borders are open, our citizens are fearful that we are being swamped by aliens, and our government that our resources are being depleted by the needs of immigrants totally without resources. Our southern border is constantly violated with hundreds of immigrants sneaking in daily, and perhaps nightly. Safety, security fears are generating ethnic hostilities or racism. People are fighting over turf. These two stations in Pisces have to do with the terrible flooding of the Mississippi. But I have just become aware of massive flooding in India where hundreds of lives have been lost and thousands have been left homeless.

Of course, the year is only half met. We are in for many more cosmic surprises with regard to the manifestation of Vesta in Pisces this time intricately involved with Pallas, her younger, smarter step-sister.

Here's one that just came over the television news. Because so many children have been killed by gunfire, accidentally, as innocent bystanders or by other armed children, parents are beginning to take out Insurance on their children's lives! So they will have money to bury them with!

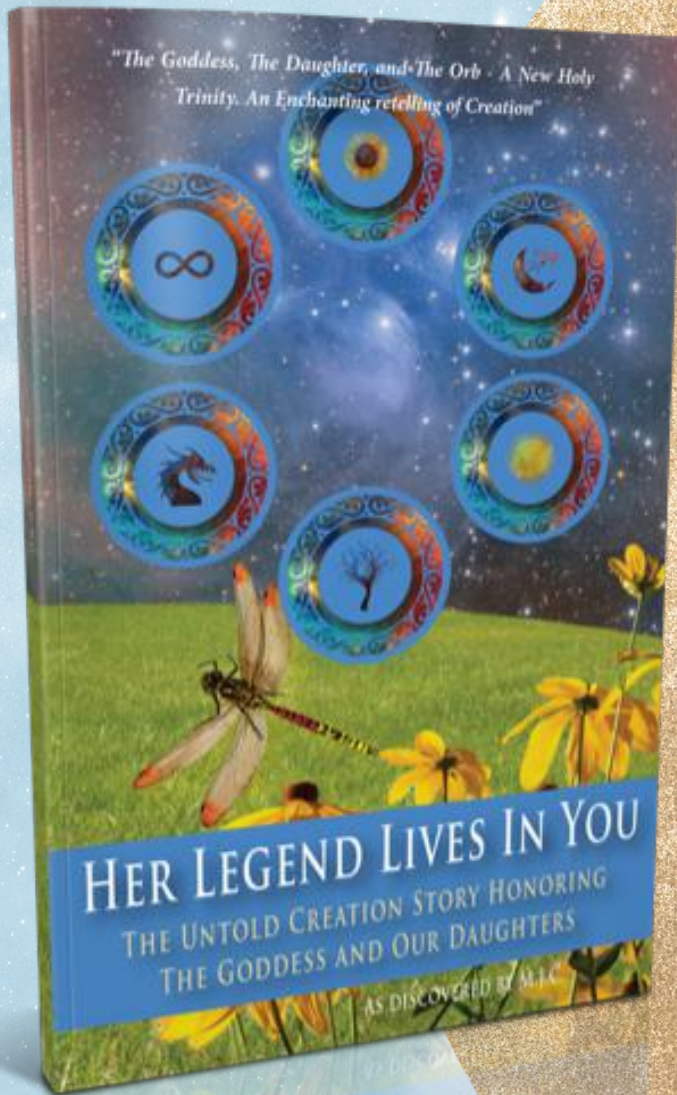

There is so often an element of sadness and sacrifice when planets have stations in Pisces. When the planet is Vesta, look for betrayal of trust, sacrifice of security, loss of homes, bereaved families.

A suggestion: If you, the reader, want to test the activity of Vesta in your life or in the lives of people around you, check your chart, and your friends' charts to see if you or they have a planet in the 11th-12th degree, especially of mutable signs, forming a square or opposition to the degrees where Vesta and Pallas had their stations. But really, any of the major Ptolemaic aspects will be felt. Watch transiting aspects to that degree and, on those days, you will find a Vesta (and Pallas) factor involved in developments in your life. Then you will begin to understand what these principles mean in your life at this time.

Eleanor Bach, the pioneer in introducing the four main asteroids (Ceres, Pallas, Juno and Vesta) to astrological analysis, was a professional astrologer and writer. The author of A Graphic Ephemeris of Sensitive Degrees: Planet Stations and Eclipses from 1900 to 2000, the publisher of Planet Watch monthly for many years, and the creator-author of the hard-cover Ephemerides of the Asteroids: Ceres, Pallas, Juno Vesta 1900 – 2000 in 1973 which opened the gates for thousands of astrologers worldwide to start exploring the 4 main asteroids in astrological research and consultations. Eleanor received the second annual Marc Edmund Jones Award at an AFAN conference. Eleanor dedicated her profound masterwork Ephemerides to Marc Edmund Jones, writing "I dedicate this work to my dearest and best teacher." Eleanor Bach died on April 30, 1995 in NYC.

THESE ARE TIMES THAT TRY OUR SOULS

The long-lasting square of Uranus to Pluto, symbolizing the need for creative paradigm shifts and changes in consciousness (although Uranus has since moved on, the effects of this transit will continue for years to come) has served, in one regard, to reveal completely the rot at the core of U.S. society, and in other countries as well.

Hatred, racism, misogyny, xenophobia, fascism, white supremacy, fear of others who are different, and those who would derive profit and power from this, have been exposed. There is no sense denying this, or trying to negotiate with those who want nothing less than total control over the populace, advancing their agenda of greed and the rape and pillage of the Earth.

But Uranus offers a way out. Individual and group efforts are required, coming from a place of clear insight and motivation, to oppose these forces. Organizations such as BLM, #MeToo, and ongoing protests against racism, police brutality, and climate change are a few examples. But it is equally important for all of us to face the racism that lives within ourselves and continues to be fueled by external events, and to deeply examine our responses. We must speak out loudly and clearly at every opportunity, with clarity and insight, and act accordingly.

Pluto was discovered in 1930, and the unleashing of its symbolic forces led to Nazi Germany and the atomic bomb soon thereafter. Uranus was discovered in 1781, marking the French and American revolutions, which sought to overthrow the tyranny of dictators and attempted to establish a new world order.

The planets last conjoined in 1965-67, heralding a time when new paradigms were being forged, in opposition to the rigidity of society and domination of the wealthy class at the expense of workers. As the planets approached one another, the Civil Rights movement gained a strong foothold, and a sense of the birth of a civilization based upon equality, justice, and liberty for all seemed eminently possible. The popular song, "The Age of Aquarius," and the musical "Hair" are examples of the zeitgeist.

But as usual, the forces of greed and control subsumed the attempts to change things.

The planets moved into square aspect about ten years ago, symbolizing a crisis in conscious action to bring this Aquarian dream into reality. It will take time, for the flailings of the dying beast of the old ways of being are dangerous, as exemplified by the trump years of U.S. government and the daily horrors perpetrated upon the Earth and all its beings, and ongoing attempts to overthrow the results of the 2020 election.

Fear of change is rampant, and far too many people are being manipulated by those who want to maintain the status quo, regressing to prior stages of development permeated by religious superstition.

The possibility exists for love, peace, and harmony to prevail. It is vital for all of us to stand in our own truth and knowingness, our actions guided by the light of spirit which seeks to create equality and freedom for all. ASTRO-LOCALITY MAPS AND CHARTS

You will see on this page the chart, calculated for Washington, D.C., for the Sun entering Cancer on June 21, 2022 (the day of the Solstice) as well as a corresponding World Map of Astro-Locality lines signifying the Rising, Setting, Above, and Below energies for the Sun, Moon and Planets.

(Hint for newcomers to the field of Astro-Locality mapping – celestial lines that are Rising and Setting appear as arcs in Yellow while celestial lines that are Above and Below appear vertically in Red. If you see the celestial symbols in Red at the Top of the Map, these are Above placements whereas if you see the celestial symbols in Red at the Bottom on the Map, these are Below placements. With the Yellow Rising and Setting arcs, if you see the symbol for the conjunction aspect that means the line is Rising whereas if you see the symbol for the opposition aspect that means the line is Setting.

These are the some of the basics, but will give you an initial help in deciphering these all-important Astrology-Locality maps.)

Relocation, Alter-Your-Destiny Reports (via the advanced Horizons Software program from Matrix) provide a wealth of information on your main alignments, opportunities and challenges in another city other than where you were born. Based originally on the pioneering work of astrologer Jim Lewis in the 1970s, each report contains several pages in interpretation as well as your birth chart relocated to the city of your choice (with the 4 main asteroids and Chiron included in the chart wheel along with the Sun, Moon, 8 planets, and the Lunar Nodes). With this offer priced at $75, you can request 5 different cities and towns from anywhere around the world.

When warring, it is a great advantage to have accurate intelligence on when and where to engage in battle or set up defenses.

The absolute advantage of having fresh intelligence on the geographic and timing qualities is covered by two military geniuses, writing in their own times. The two classics on conducting war were Sun Tzu's, The Art of War (sometime between 770-221 BCE); and Clausewitz's, On War (1832).

In both works, the topic of place comes up. The first of The Sun Tzu's five keys to victory was, "...knowing when to fight and when not to." In the chapter on Deployment, he admonishes, "In the Art of War, first comes scoping, then measurement, then calculation, then balancing and finally victory. The Earth is the basis for scoping, scoping the basis for measurement..." One more tidbit, "Thus if you know in advance the time and place of engagement, you can march a thousand li and still join battle."

Clausewitz wrote in chapter three of book one, "the relationship between warfare and terrain determines the peculiar character of military action.... To master it a special gift is need, which is given the too restricted name of a sense of locality." As to timing, he says, "War is the realm of chance."

of the American Military Industrial Complex. I study war and its relationships. Let me repeat, I study war's relationships and I have realized an amazing pattern in the U.S., July 4, 1776, 'birth' moment. There is a 'map of reality' that discloses extraordinary U.S. military relationships.

In a recent conversation with Mark Lerner, we discussed my anxious mindset recovering from covid, and how I focused upon my breath, we pondered our lived realization that every moment of time is precious and we, the living, have relationship to all of it.

Simultaneously, in the backdrop of our lives a new space telescope, the Webb, has brought into focus a vast field of new relationships, a new cosmos, which humans, up until now, have been completely ignorant of. We now, in a time when the tide of existential challenges is daunting, face the task of integrating this newly revealed knowledge of relationships into our strategies for navigating life. This might be a Don't Look Up moment for humanity.

Recently it was announced that planet Earth officially has 8 billion human inhabitants, tied together by the pattern I discovered (and named) for America's military. Not all of them have firsthand experiences of the war's manifestations. Indeed, numerically, only a fraction of a percent suffers from the physical impacts today's armies with their artillery, drones, bomb blasts, bullets, and tanks. But war is like the covid virus, with its effects compelling a relationship with everyone (eventually) and seeping everywhere. War is seen not just in the spectacle of armed soldiers, battlefields, but in the migrations of family, the food insecurity, the economic impacts, and the living casualties of war, suffering from PTSD, choking our streets.

Again, our Earth relationships are universal, but much is is unrealized, like the new, unfamiliar celestial sky just revealed by the Webb telescope. Many in the world are connected today, but unaware of the cost of playing with the wiring.

Wait for it...!

The Eisenhower Administration created, as part of the newly formed Pentagon (DoD), the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA). But DARPA was not part of the regular DoD military research division. On June 3, 2021, UK's Economist Magazine published that ARPA/DARPA, "is the agency that shaped the modern world..."

DARPA, funded by Congress, is said to be the driver of the U.S. Military Industrial Complex that POTUS Eisenhower warned about on January 17, 1961, as he left office. There's something about that January 17th date for U.S. military adventures - think Desert Storm launched January 17, 1991.

While enjoying the benefits of living in a Military Industrial Complex, there are many relationships that are held Top Secret that you might object to. Some of you readers can recall from the movie classic, The Wizard of Oz, Dorothy's dog Toto discovering the Oz operating behind a curtain. It was a great shock. Some secrets are diabolical, and are hidden in plain sight. They are wrapped in benefits that serve billions, which makes them respectable. One DARPA innovation - GPS system, fits this description and would have caught Sun Tzu's and Clausewitz's attention.

Wayne Moody

Consider this short list of other DARPA innovations that have shaped the world we co-inhabit. DARPA was responsible for such familiar items as: Agent Orange, airliners, digital cameras, hearts and minds campaigns, Duct tape, low light photography, the microwave ovens, and the big one, the ARPANET, which evolved into the internet – the world-wide-web (WWW).

Back to GPS. February 22, 3:44 p.m., PST, 1978 was a world changing moment. At that moment a rocket was launched from Vandenberg AFB, CA. carrying Navstar1, the first of 24 Navstar navigation satellites. This was the launch of the DoD satellite-based Global Positioning Satellite (GPS) system. The system's intellectual foundations are Einstein's special and general relativity theories, dealing with time. Specifically the system determined location, plotted navigation in three-dimensions, allowing accurate tracking around the Earth, mapping the geography of the Earth, and the establishment of exact 'universal' time. All of which is of great strategic value during war.

Astrologers have the perfect tool-belt to make all this actionable. This world-changing moment, from 1978, fits nicely into the timing of today, August 11th, 2022, the inauguration of Mark Lerner's GPS Astrology Magazine. Literally, GPS is helping his journalism shine forth into the world.

GPS has transformed war! Navigation, timing and tracking innovations have led to tremendous improvements in U.S. military AWAC systems, moving from human navigators to more advanced computer directed flying command platforms, like the E-3 Sentry. These high flying platforms operate over battlefields conspicuous with their piggy-backed saucers: synchronizing operations, providing navigation information, pinpointing targets, and locating personnel. directing tactical moves.

The GPS relationship is the brain of the drone aircraft, like the Global Hawk and infamous Predator, and it informed the Abrams tank computers, navigating them to overwhelming victory over Iraqi tankers, during Operation Desert Storm. Eventually, GPS would inform the artillery, helicopters, smartphones, etc. used on the Afghanistan and Iraq battlefields - America's longest wars.

Unpacking the facts of the GPS moment would be particularly precious for astrologers and those they serve. The understanding of symbol, place and the flow of time can be made actionable, adding to one's skill set. Think agency! The GPS is a man-made reality physically functioning in Earth's atmosphere, while reflecting symbolic realities. In that physical realm of the sky the U.S. has taken a large lead, amongst the militaries of the world. With this advantage the U.S. has militarized the heavens with the introduction of GPS guided Predator Drones, armed with smart Hellfire missiles.

Meanwhile, on the Earth, in many American communities across the mainland, military assault weapons, like the AR (Armalite) -15, a version of the

Wayne Moody

DoD's AR-16 used during the Vietnam War, are being used to massacre civilians. A perverse lesson in the truth of "As Above, so below!"

For millennia, Mars was the astrology planet corresponding with war - the Red planet. The planet Mars in the GPS horoscope is in the 12th house at 22 Cancer 37' retrograde. As Mark and I pondered, every moment has a relationship with every other moment, making the 1978 GPS moment Mars alignment to the Mercury (24 Cancer 12' retrograde) of the U.S. horoscope moment from July 4, 4:47 p.m., 1776, in Philadelphia not just related but extremely relevant, because of its proximity. Mercury is about realities in the air and communications, realms where the U.S. assumed leadership in the world. Again, notably, the U.S. pioneered placing military (Mars) machines in the Earth's atmosphere and invented the internet.

In the late 20th and early 21st Century the U.S. and GPS were joined-at-the-hip. Now it's getting crowded in the sky and DARPA has been busy developing a whole new system that doesn't require satellites.

The GPS horoscope lists a table of the Declinations of planets. In this table Mars is at +25 25', way Out-of-Bounds. For a horoscope planet to be beyond 23.5 degrees, north or south of the equator is to be way out-of-bounds and the point of emphasis.

This Mars emphasis seems to have been the open secret of the February 22nd, 1978, moment. Old school astrologers learned that the 12th house was the house of self-undoing, of secret enemies, an example of a cautionary tale, of self-undoing through a diabolical, Frankenstein monster invention. We shouldn't be surprised by this, after all the GPS system was developed by DARPA.

For another, more grounded perspective of the U.S. horoscope and GPS maps of reality, they can be converted into familiar 2-dimensional maps annotated with astrological legends and symbols.

I use such a map to show a pattern I researched (2013-2014) and dubbed the War Impulse Pattern (WIP). Note that lines labeled Mars and Neptune are running through NATO countries. They trace through geography where the U.S. has history. U.S. treasure is being spent all around the lines in July 2022, as U.S. boots are deployed on the ground and U.S. advanced weapons of war, Abrams tanks, computers, drones, HIMARS missile systems, night vision, and the universally used iPhones are being pre-positioned or sold to NATO members. Most iPhones are manufactured in Zhengzhou, China under a branch of the WIP.

Now, please look at the attached map and take note of all four of the GPS Ground Stations tight within U.S. WIP Template lines. This is no mean coincidence. This knowledge is a strategic advantage in time of war.

In this extraordinary map, the WIP template has branches (35 North latitude) running through Tehran, Iran. In my 2019 book, War Impulse Pattern - Primer to Not on the Map, captioning my last map (page #95) showing Tehran, Iran, I wrote, "great danger exists."

THE DEPTH OF INNER CHILD CARDS ~ A FAIRY TALE TAROT

ISHA LERNER AND MARK LERNER

Featured Spotlight

An Interview with Isha Lerner

By Erin M. Kelly

At a time when people run the risk of losing their imaginations to excessive television and mass-media advertising, the Inner Child Cards, created by two professional astrologers with extensive backgrounds in tarot symbols, acted on a wonderful vision of fairy tales and the tarot. They explored the idea one summer morning in 1988, at the time of a full moon. They found the mystical force of the tarot to be a graceful companion to the mystery teachings of fairy tales and myth in a deck of cards for children and the young at heart.

"Revelations showered down on us like brilliant falling stars," said authors Isha and Mark Lerner. "We were impregnated by a vision and wisdom beyond ourselves. To say this project has been inspiring for us would be an understatement."

It had been an ongoing manifestation since an initial meeting at the Findhorn Foundation in Forres, Scotland, in 1977, where Isha and Mark met up with several hundred people working with personal transformation and planetary service. Together they set free the ideas and inspirations that were gestating for several years. The deck is like a butterfly, liberated from the cocoon, open to the light and dancing with the fire.

"My deepest inspiration was my own pain and childhood longings, and learning through teachings of my mother who was strong and respectable," Isha said. "She taught us that our tears are the elixir and that our pain is an unpolished jewel of potential radiance. My deepest hope is to bring forward that message."

The deck has been translated in six languages, hitting a worldwide audience. "It has been very rewarding," Isha said. Many specialists are using the cards for past life recall, in children's shelters and for child therapy. They are also used in remembering the lost innocence of childhood memories and have been inspirational in opening the channel of the heart. "It's really incredible what children see in these cards," Lerner said.

Inner Child Cards are an evolutionary expression of the wisdom and magic of the tarot. The tarot is an ageless body of knowledge whose origin is not determined. However, the first actual tarot deck was recorded to be found in the twelfth century in Europe. In the Inner Child Cards, suggestion of early imprints of rhyme, riddle and verse become the stepping stone toward maturation and imagination for those who study them. Hundreds of decks continued to be created - from many cultures and in all corners of the world. In designing the Inner Child Cards, Mark and Isha Lerner have revealed the beauty, wisdom, joy and innocence embedded in the twenty-two Major Trumps. "We were striving to create a deck that parents, teachers and families could utilize without getting lost in a myriad of arcane meanings that are difficult to fathom," Isha said.

Isha and Mark Lerner were inspired to create these cards through curiosity and innocence. "We wanted a deck to be safe in the hands of people of all ages including children. I have three daughters ages 20, 18 and 6, and it was important to do this for them. My husband at the time and I put our heart and soul into this project and worked on it for seven years. It was part of our own journey to find wholeness again..." Isha explained.

The ornate cards were visualized by Isha after meditating on each image. "I brought the image down and then had them illustrated by Christopher Guilfoil." Impressionistic and colorfully vibrant, the Inner Child Cards stir the imagination and express the movement of the cards' meaning. The tarot images help to bridge the faceted pieces of our broken self. These images probe the soul, unveil the power of light and dark and unleash the impulse to understand desire, love and conflict. From the deep perception of "story hood" archetypes comes the awakening of subconscious forces that, in time, heal the spirit. For instance, the story of "Sleeping Beauty" and the Death card are parallel in meaning if you understand the deeper messages of personal metamorphosis at the core of the fairy tale and the thirteenth Trump. In an interesting way, children are being taught about the magic of the tarot and the twenty-two-fold path of destiny through fairy tales. They have been given a "key" to the treasure chest of the hidden meaning in fairy tales and ancient folklore. Inner Child Cards has ordered the fairy tales into a magical sequence on the royal road of the tarot.

"These stories of yesteryear imply solutions. They are never meant to give answers, to judge, to punish or to dismiss the reality that, while we are mortal beings, we are not unlike the magnificent fairies, angels and wizards encountered in childhood literature," Lerner says.

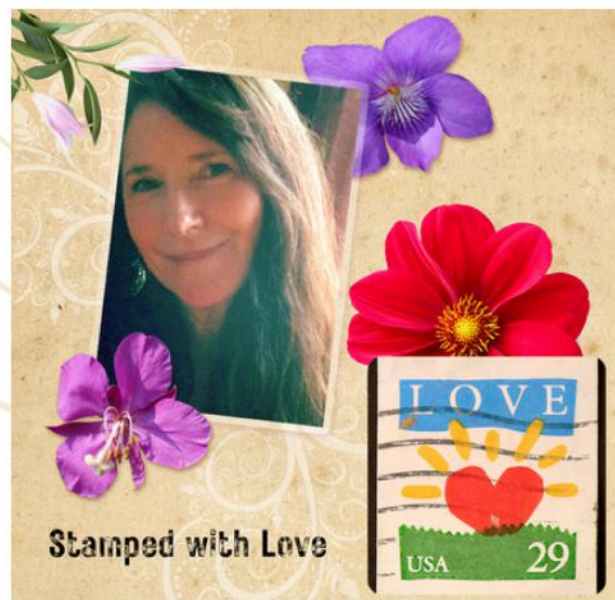

Isha Lerner

"Life's riddles and complexities are not solved in words but in foresight, clear vision and experience. The inward knowledge renews the soul's life. We all feel more youthful and vibrant as we grow into the imaginative world. Because human beings must enter life through the gates of childhood, fairy tales will always be here. They provide a fertile meeting point for the simple, young mind and the wisdom of age."

Fairy tales themselves speak to the alchemy of the soul. They have reached and touched people more than I would have ever imagined... I have been very grateful. "The inner child cards are a tiny facet of a greater collective of healing tools," explained Isha. "When used, they can be part of the treasure chest of interpersonal and personal healing."

Isha Lerner has been working with flower essences, astrology, tarot and the healing arts for the wholeness of her adult life. She learned the value of nature and beauty while living in Hawaii in early years, and later at the Findhorn Foundation in Forres, Scotland where she was a community member from 1976 ~ 1980.

An international astrologer, tarot consultant, lecturer, and Writer, Isha has been a staff member and writer for the monthly astrological journal, Welcome To Planet Earth, and has authored two notable works: The Inner Child Cards: A Journey Through Fairy Tales, Myth, and Nature published by Bear and Co, in 1993, and The Power Of Flowers, Triple Goddess Tarot, and Tarot of the Four Elements

Isha is owner and creator of Power of Flower Healing Essence Company. The flower essences are a high vibrational healing method which work at the cellular level as well as the higher levels of consciousness. You can visit her website, Power of Flower's here: www.powerfloweressences.com

Isha lives in Eugene, Oregon. Her work is dedicated to and inspired by the unfolding beauty of her three daughters, Gabriella, Katya and Sophie and five grandchildren: Francesca, Kingston, Kora, Nino, and Ari.

DREAM JOURNAL

by Max O'Banion

Starting your dream journal. It's never too late or too early to connect with the cosmos.

Greetings dear reader. I will attempt to relate my experiences and value of our connection to the highest of the universe within our very self. I will not overstate or understate any component or experience as I have nothing to sell. Merely I'm hoping you may find it useful in your own unfoldment. I consider it as giving back to the circle that gave so much to me over my 55 years. I can certainly relate to the grind of 'Corporate America', where anti-anxiety, blood pressure, heart medication, anti-depressants and ulcer medications, are as common as candy in grade school. I will not elaborate further the challenges of thriving in such an existence as I know, we all share burdens in everyday life that tests our own mettle. Our soul would have it no other way, 'WINGS' we were given and 'WINGS' we will have to use. My advantage and the crutch I lean on is...I'm spiritual.

Max O'Banion

Does being spiritual mean you don't feel the anxiety of the bills waiting in your mailbox, the burden of weight each day brings, or the look on family member's faces that depends on you to supply their needs?

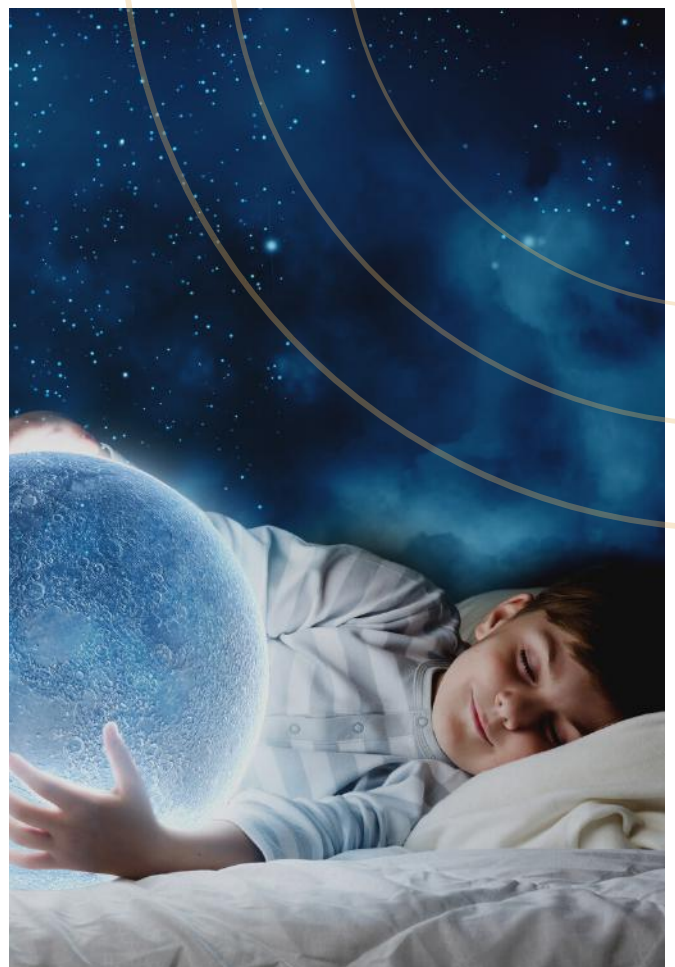

No! Not entirely. It does give you the courage however to again take up the challenge and get through the next day knowing there is a much higher purpose for your struggle. Anyone trying to sell you some elixir, drug, philosophy or map that reflects an easy path up the mountain, should be taken with a grain of salt. You are not however, left without guidance. This my dear reader, is what I will discuss in my own experience with you and hopefully help you connect again to the source of your own being if you so choose to do so.

I'll start with my first dream recorded when I was 16. The first night I placed the pen and notebook next to my bed, and wasn't quite sure what to expect. I didn't think about the next day, or even the notebook. I thought a bit about what I read that day and simply planned to let the alarm clock surprise me when it went off, and soon drifted out of consciousness. I found myself late for Geometry Class and was rushing from my locker to get to my desk. I entered the room a few minutes late and all the students were facing the instructor who was already standing at the blackboard. I would quietly slip into my seat and get my book out, hopefully unnoticed. To my surprise, Jacky, the proverbial class clown and one of my few friends, stood up and pointed at me. He shouted in a loud voice and everyone turned to look at me, "Foul on you!" He exclaimed. Everyone turned to look and I could feel their eyes on me. Though totally surprised by this, I quickly responded. "Foul on me? For what?" Jacky replied, "Foul on you for walking through life with your head down." With this, I woke and thought a moment what had just happened. I turned to look at the clock which had 15 minutes before it was time to get my day started. I then remembered the notebook sitting on the end table and quickly recorded the dream as my first entry. I would spend much of the day considering its meaning and source as I had put Cayce's readings to the test concerning higher guidance through dreams and the universe immediately responded. It was just the tip of the iceberg.

Since that first dream recorded nearly 40 years ago, I would obtain valuable guidance, insights, warnings, communication with deceased family members and on occasion, a visit from those wonderful higher beings with their 'OH So Lovely' voices that ever seem aware of what I'm attempting to do.

I'll switch gears here dear reader and go over some details through my own studies you may find interesting. I've often heard people say, "I don't dream," or "For some reason, I don't remember my dreams." Even in spiritual study groups and communities. I'm not oblivious to this age's challenges as well as the prior two generations who have been raised on less than organic foods, whose systems have been introduced to synthetic chemistry, which can't be good for your glands and button-mashing hours by the younger generation perched behind a radiating computer screen dulling their brains with video games. I will encourage you, however, with Rudolf Steiner's and Edgar Cayce's own assertion that everyone does dream. Steiner even goes as far to say, regardless of the sleep hours or schedule. In a future article, I'll address another helpful item known as the 'crystals that speak.'

It is certainly an age of the intellect dear reader. Test scores, formal education, long hours at work and the ever rotating wheel of bills and responsibilities that seems to stay in place no matter how fast we run, is certainly the order of the day. Lord Hades now rules the castles and lands in the form of our intellect, and he will do all he can to protect and provide for the child that is our ego self. He provides security, sanctuary, routine and public acceptance. His wife, our dear Persephone, has long since been banished from the lands for the good of the child. Her gifts of intuition, arts, living in the moment and connection with nature, are no longer valued as much as they once were. Though the burden Hades places on us is cumbersome and requires most of our strength and attention, we can, during the few moments we get off the routine wheel, hear her voice softly calling to us from across the river.

In future articles, I'll go more in depth of various dreams and strengthening the recall process.

Love and Light,
Max O'Banion

Max experienced many higher realms we all have access to our in dreams. From divine guidance, angelic encouragement, future events, visits from deceased relatives, warnings, and the subtle art used in ever making us face our own creations, as the images are universal and there to guide every being. These are the same realms all experience after passing through the portal of death. From his early introduction to the Edgar Cayce Readings he began recording his own in 1983, and studied under Dolores Richardson who for many years was an author and lecturer at the ARE. Today Max resides in middle GA with his wife Chimgee and their son Dovchin where he continues various spiritual studies. You can reach him with questions at essenereborn1967@yahoo.com.

LORI & RJ MUSIC

presents Music & Life

Tone Color

The quality of speech sound that comes from its tone rather than its pitch or volume. The color or quality of tone of an instrument or voice.

Intensity

The strength, power, force, or concentration of musical energy. Passionate and serious attitude or quality of the music.

Pitch

The measure of how high or low a note is relative to other notes. Pitch is determined by the frequency of vibrations per second of the sound-producing agent.

Duration

The period of time that the tone or sound lasts.

Music affects us profoundly. Our ancestors knew the affect of music upon the human system. Music is the universal language. Everybody likes some kind of music.

If you listen to music that is pleasant and enjoyable at least twice a day, you surely can have better health. Dr. Ralph Lewis, PHD in Science, Philosophy and Mysticism says, "Music that you love produces an altered state of pleasure. Music is the vibration of the world and universe."

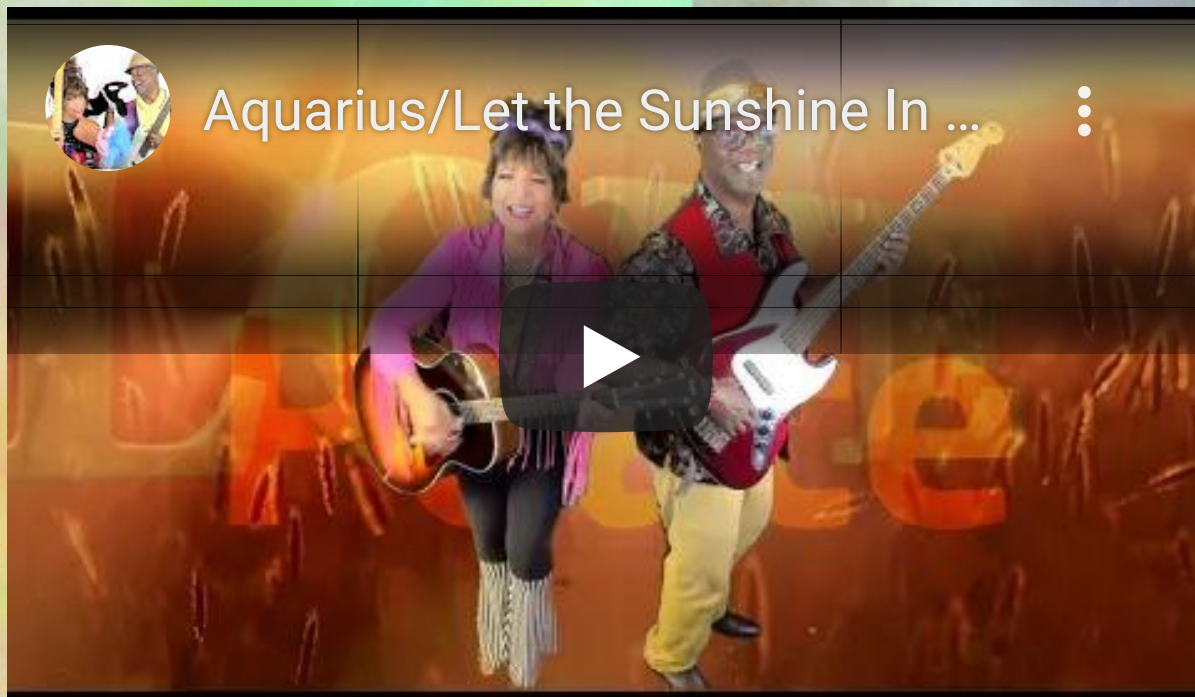

There's no question about the beneficial effects of positive music. When you have 'good, pleasant tones' playing as background, ambient sound, you can use it in the home, classroom or even the office to create a more pleasant environment and atmosphere.

AMERICA'S PLUTO RETURN

by Adrian Duncan

The last time Pluto was at 27 degrees Capricorn, the American colonies were in the middle of fighting a bitter war against the British. In the middle of this war – on July 4th 1776 – independence was declared. Major battles were still being fought – in Boston, Long Island, White Plains, Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine and many more. Many of these battles were lost, but in 1781 at Yorktown, George Washington finally prevailed. That was five years after the Declaration of Independence, and Pluto had by this time moved into Aquarius. America was born in strife, with a belief that armed insurrection was justified.

The right to bear arms is enshrined in the 2nd Amendment, and today 40% of Americans live in a house with a gun. Each gun owner has an average of five weapons. (Note 1) 68% of all Republicans believe that the 2020 election was stolen from Trump. Republicans have twice as many guns than Democrats. 30% of Republicans (according to a PRRI poll) believe “true American patriots may have to resort to violence in order to save our country.”

In 2022 Pluto returns to 27 degrees Capricorn. Should we be worried?

Pluto and Social Revolution

The last passage of Pluto from Capricorn to Aquarius was a time of upheaval marked by the French and American revolutions, which profoundly changed the world political landscape. History may not exactly repeat itself, but it rhymes, so there is every reason to believe a similar upheaval is on the way in the 2020's. Part of this upheaval will be in Russia, mid-decade, because of the conjunction of Saturn and Neptune when they simultaneously ingress into Aries in 2025. Part will be connected with developments in China, when Pluto transits the country's Moon and Ascendant in Aquarius in the same period.

But what will happen in America, specifically in January 2025, when the winner of the next election will, theoretically, be inaugurated? [...]

Total Lunar Eclipse

November 9, 2022

(From 14 years ago in 2008...) The innovative, user-friendly Mark Lerner's Zen Astrology of the Natural World 2008 wall calendar is a tour de force - linking the cosmos to earth, astronomy to astrology, and historical cycles to contemporary life. Major celestial alignments are highlighted and interpreted, and the pioneering use of icons allows for at-a-glance astrological assessment of what each calendar day has in store!*

Mark Lerner has been a professional astrologer with a worldwide practice for over three decades. He is the author of Mysteries of Venus and publishes the well-respected Great Bear Enterprises website.

*Because of my creating these kinds of annual calendars many years ago for Amber Lotus, I began the pioneering work of the use of Visual Icons – rather than words and interpretative paragraphs – to describe what is happening with Major Sky Cycles every day. In addition, I have been writing the Astrology Cosmic Calendar since the summer of 1981 (41 years ago) and which is now an App (see the Astrology Cosmic Calendar App page elsewhere in this issue of GPS Astrology).

Since three days this coming November 2022 are of critical importance for everyone to know about in advance, we are offering to you November 7, 8 & 9 in a Graphic Version and I will be creating an entire Podcast on the upcoming Total Lunar Eclipse that occurs on November 8 and will offer much more about this Future Shock to influence Humanity and Mother Earth in my AstroScope podcasts and in the next edition of GPS Astrology.
